Lancaster Farming

VOL. 31 No. 25 | Five Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, April 19, 1986 | $8.50 per Year

Mrs. Scott (left, bottom photo) and her herdsman, Heinz Meilke will be welcoming visitors from across the country to Ardrossan Farms when the 111th National Convention comes to Pennsylvania April 22 to 25.

This issue has features about Ardrossan Farms on A-20, and Masonic Homes on A-22. Also included are interviews with outstanding Ayrshire individuals Wesley Harding, Jr. on A-26 and Milton Brubaker on A-31. Look for complete coverage of this convention in next week's issue.

A dairyman in buyout shares his thoughts

To get first-hand thoughts and experiences of a dairyman who made an accepted bid in the whole-herd buyout program, Lancaster Farming's Editor, Everett Newswanger met with James F. Myer, 170 W. Brubaker Valley Road, Lititz, this week. The interview in Myer's farm home sought to answer such questions as: Was enough information available to make the decision on a bid price?; Did the decision pose any moral or ethical questions?; What effect did mass media reports have on personal relationships in the farm community?; and Would this dairyman do it again?

Here are the questions and the answers given:

NEWSWANGER - How long have you been in the dairy business?

MYER - Since 1961, about 25 years.

NEWSWANGER - How many animals from your herd are in the buyout program?

MYER - A total of 295. This includes milking animals and all young stock.

NEWSWANGER - What factors went into your decision to enter the program?

MYER - The amount of emphasis recently on the milk surplus probably got my attention as much as anything. I was convinced there was a m ilk surplus nationwide even though locally there may not be a real big surplus.

NEWSWANGER - Did you find enough information available to make your bid decision?

MYER - The bidding information from the government's side was very limited. Farmers were pretty much in the dark about the government's thinking on what

Suspect turkey flock does not have avian flu

BY JACK HUBLEY

HARRISBURG — According to test results received yesterday morning, a suspect Lancaster County turkey flock does not contain the deadly H5N2 avian influenza virus.

Following a flu outbreak in a gamebird flock near Ephrata last week, surveillance efforts uncovered a virus of unknown type in a nearby turkey flock. By press time yesterday PDA spokesman Bob Bunty was able to confirm that the first half of the virus had been typed as "H1", which is definitely not avian influenza, and may turn out to be swine flu.

"There was a suspicion that it was swine flu as we went into the testing," said Bunty, adding that there are hogs being raised on the premises. If further testing does confirm the presence of swine flu, no depopulation will be necessary, Bunty said. The tests are being done by the National Veterinary Services Lab in Ames, Iowa.

The latest confirmed outbreak of avian flu occurred in an Ephrata-area gamebird flock containing 1,200 chukars and 800 guinea fowl. The flock was depopulated Wednesday.

Both the state's Department of Agriculture and Poultry Federation consider it to be an isolated incident posing no major threat to the poultry industry.

"It seems to be linked to a trucker from New Jersey," said the Poultry Federation's Tim Allwein, adding that the poultry hauler stopped to pick up a load of birds at the Ephrata-area farm sometime during late March or early April. One week later the trucker's farm was found to be infected with the virus.

Only two weeks ago, Agriculture Secretary Richard Grubb declared the state to be free of avian influenza and called for an end to the embargoes on Pennsylvania poultry and products imposed by numerous states and a number of foreign countries.

"We asked for an end to embargoes because we believed our state to be a safe one from which to purchase poultry and eggs," said Grubb. "In view of our effective surveillance program and our industry's cooperation, we still believe so."

New twist in tillage

Slit till system saves soil, water, time and money

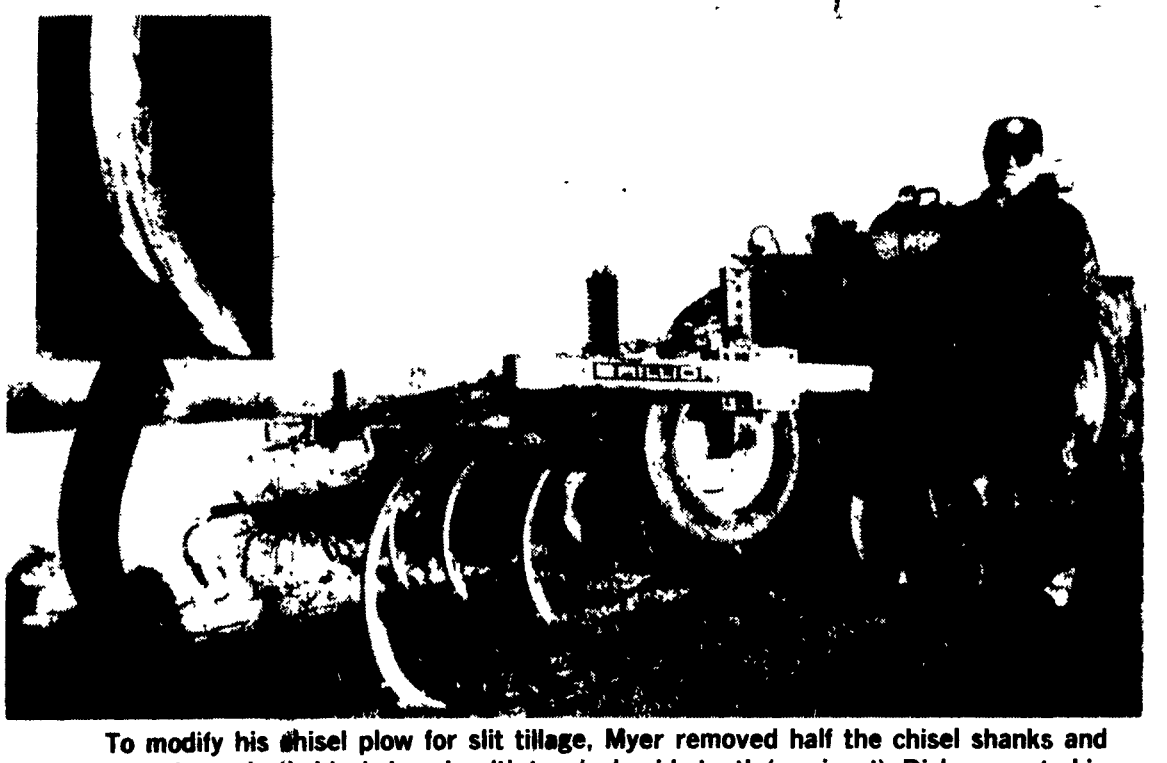
BY JACK HUBLEY

LANCASTER — Any way you slice it, tillage is simply manipulating the soil in preparation for planting. The trick is to keep the ground where it belongs after heavy equipment has jarred it loose from its moorings.

Today's crop farmer has a broad range of techniques and equipment at his disposal to get the job done, from the traditional moldboard plow to no-till systems, and plenty of imaginative variations in between.

One option that seems to fall smack in the middle of these two extremes is the slit system employed by Herbert Myer of Lancaster County. Myer farms 110 acres of corn near the town of Lampeter and has been using what he's dubbed slit tillage on his corn

(Turn to Page A24)



To modify his chisel plow for slit tillage, Myer removed half the chisel shanks and replaced standard chisel shovels with two-inch-wide teeth (see inset). Disks mounted in front of the unit help to guide the five chisel teeth, spaced 30 inches apart.

POULTRY MARKETS

Philadelphia Eggs

Thursday, April 17, 1986
Report Supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Prices were unchanged to one cent lower on mediums. Trade sentiment was cautiously steady. Cartoned egg movement was noted as fairly decent for the most part. Floor stocks continued at least adequate, and turnovers on all sizes were deemed satisfactory. Additional offerings were generally available in both graded and ungraded packs, and this product was causing most concern as discounting was still being used to attract buyers.

Prices to retailers: sales to volume buyers, consumer grades white eggs in cartons delivered store door:

A Extra Large 62-66; A Large 60-64; A Medium 52-55.

Delmarva Poultry

Thursday, April 17, 1986

Market Comment: The overall call for ready to cook whole birds was declining and was about moderate for the most part. Plant clearances varied from sluggish to good. Supplies of leg quarters and particularly legs remained under price pressure. Wings were irregularly available but ample for buyers' needs. Cutlets continued to clear quite well while rib-on-breasts were showing spot increases in availability. Line-run breasts remained tight. Less than trucklot asking prices remainded unchanged at 52-60 cents. Live supplies were moderate. Weights were in a full range. Slaughter schedules were light as a result of an occasional plant trimming operations. The undertone was steady to barely steady.

Estimated slaughter of broiler fryers in Delmarva:

Estimated 4/17 1,841,000; Actual 4/10 1,932,000.

Actual 4/15 1,966,000.

Average Weights 4/15 4.43, 4/8 4.43.

OPINION

A bite in the hand

We've seen and heard a lot of trumped up charges lately. Charges that dairymen who participate in the whole herd buyout program will rake in large profits at the expense of tax payers. Often one segment of agriculture is pitted against another segment. Political motives or ignorance of facts about farming seem to invade these reports. Sensationalism prevails. Therefore for the sake of our city and urban friends– even our farm and agri-business friends– let's calmly pull together a sympathetic farmer's view of the situation.

First let's look in on a farmer who has milked cows for 30 years. He as raised his family on the farm and put his heart into the humanitarian effort to produce food for a hungry world. He's honest in the site of all his neighbors. A community leader. In addition, this farmer is extremely sensitive to the problem of over production and the cost to government under the price support programs for milk and milk products. He feels sorry for the young farmers who can't go into farming or continue in farming because of this surplus. He takes a part-time job off the farm rather than increase his herd size because he doesn't want to be part of the problem.

When the government offered to buy out his whole herd to take out surplus production this farmer accepted the offer at a reasonable bid. He reasoned that since it cost the government $17 per hundred lbs. to store milk products, the reduced cost to government would amount to $120 thousand per year over the five year program. That would amount to over a half-million dollar tax payer savings from his farm alone. In addition, since our farm friend chose to go out of business in the last buyout period, all the milk he produces from now until the cows go out the farm lane will be taxed at the rate of 40 cents per hundred lb. to support the program. That will give another $4 thousand to the government to support his own payment. And since the income from the program will be taxable and no production costs will be subtracted, IRS will take right back a sizeable chunk of the buyout payment.

Of course our farmer gave up his right to have a herd dispersal sale and the recognition and income that comes from such an event. And should he need to sell his farm in the next five years, the deed restrictions that prohibit the production of milk will likely reduce the value of the property by an amount equal to the payment he received.

When you look at the overall situation, the US Government will be paying 14,000 farmers $1.8 billion to slaughter or export their dairy cattle and to stay out of dairying for five years. This will prevent 12.3 billion lbs. of milk, produced anually by these herds from ever entering the U.S. market and save the government about $10.5 billion in the purchase of surplus dairy products over the five-year program.

About 38% of the total cost will be paid by dairymen who continue to produce milk. These assessments will total about $684 million. Taxable income can be expected to return about $360 million to the government. So the dairymen will be contributing about 1 billion dollars of the $1.8 billion total. The government's share will be about $800 million. In addition, to help prevent undue depression of the beef market the government is required to purchase an extra 400 million pounds of red meat during the next five years. This purchase will likely cost another $800 million. Therefore the combined net total cost to the government from the herd buyout and the purchase of red meat will be approximately $1.6 billion.

Here's the bottom line. The difference between the government's $10.5 billion reduction in surplus dairy products purchase and the $1.6 billion net cost of the herd buy out and red meat purchases is $8.9 billion. That's an $8.9 billion saving of taxpayer money.

To save taxpayer money is not as sensational as to spend it. But once again we find our farm friend has completed his life in dairying just like he lived it. Caring for a hungry world. Caring for his neighbors both rural and urban. And concerned that he not be a part of the surplus problem. As for sensational charges, we would call it just another case of a bit to hand that feeds.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Practice Strict Sanitation

Once again we are stressing bio-security for all types of farms. Farmers are continually faced with disease problems: LT, AI and VVND in poultry, pseudorabies in hogs, Johnes in dairy and others. Yes, right not we have an alert in AI (Avian Influenza) in northern Lancaster County, an LT (Laryngotracheitis) flock, and VVND (Velogenic Viscerotropic Newcastle Disease) in pet birds.

We urge livestock and poultry producers to make every effort to prevent the spread of these contagious diseases. Many of these infections are brought home by the owner or with the purchase of a new animal. Infections can be spread very easily from farm to farm.

In this part of the country where the density of poultry and livestock is so great, producers should be alert to the possibility of spreading diseases. When returning from another farm, different clothes and footwear should be used. Never spread dead birds in the fields because stray dogs, cats, flies and wild birds can spread the infection from those birds to your neighbors farm. We urge every producer to give attention to the prevention of diseases through good management and the use of good sanitation practices.

To Clean Pastures Before Turning Animals On Them

A careful check of pastures before turning cows into them can be time well spent. Trash, broken glass, and wire may produce serious udder and foot injuries. So, move or bury the debris.

Nails sticking through boards may produce serious puncture wounds in feet. Old farm implements should be hauled away; cows seem unable to resist stepping through old discs or harrows, often with disastrous results.

Fertilizer and fertilizer bags are deadly; especially those containing nitrates. Cows will eagerly kill themselves eating it.

In spite of laws, we still have a few people who will pitch a bagful of junk out of their cows while they drive along our highways. A walk through your pasture fields before turning your cows out, is time very well spent.

To Understand Persistent Weed Problems

Just how persistent do we have to be in order to control weed problems? Well, the answer to this question comes from weed scientists who ran germination tests on weed seeds which had been buried for up to 50 years.

They report that 29% of Johnsongrass seed germinated after being buried for 3½ years; morning glory 74% after 5 years; pigweed 66% after 40 years and dock 52% after 50 years. They further reported that 51 of 107 species tested still had live seeds after 20 years.

The reason these seeds remain in the soil for such a long period without sprouting is apparently related to environmental conditions. According to weed experts, some seeds need just the right combination of moisture, temperature, and nutrients before they will germinate. This explains why we may suddenly be faced with a weed problem we thought was cured several years ago.

To Manage Poultry House Equipment

General management of poultry house equipment is important in maintaining a comfortable environment for chickens and turkeys. Defective equipment should be repaired or replaced promptly, especially if it is involved with the delivery of feed or water to the birds.

Rusty and bent cages will allow some birds to escape and may trap or injure other birds. It can also cause an increase in cracked egg shells. All sharp edges on the poultry equipment must be removed to avoid injuries. Rusty and decaying feed bins are another problem; they allow moisture to get to the feed, resulting in mold and sick birds.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

OF AND YET BEYOND US

April 20, 1986

Background Scripture: Luke 1:5-56; 2:21-40.
Devotional Reading: Luke 1:8-17.

When I was a seminary student, I found it relatively easy to speak and speculate about both God and Christ. Furthermore, it was never difficult to distinguish between the Father and the Son.

But, when it came to the study of the Holy Spirit, nothing ever seemed easy or clear-cut. It was like putting together a jigsaw puzzle and finding that lots of the pieces wouldn't fit. Furthermore, it was obvious — and somewhat of a relief — to me that every one of my fellow students seemed to have the same difficulty. And, to tell the truth, it didn't seem our professors were that much more successful, either.

"COME UPON YOU"

To be sure, in my theology textbook there was a chapter on "The Person and Role of the Holy Spirit." But this seemed the most contrived and unconvincing chapter in the whole book, an attempt to make logical and clear dimension that defies explanation, simplification and systematization.

In time, I decided that, instead of concerning myself with the theology of the Holy Spirit, I would focus on the experience of the Holy Spirit. One may not be able to rationalize and systematize that experience, but that does not mean we cannot gain some understanding and appreciation of this dimension of our spiritual lives.

In the first two chapters of Luke there are three important experiences of the Holy Spirit. In the first of these, Mary is assured that "The Holy Spirit will come upon you" (1:35). Although Mary could not understand how it could be that she was to bear a child — let alone that he would be the Christ — she was assured that this would be accomplished by God's power: the Holy Spirit. So, sometimes, the experiences of the Holy Spirit is the experience of divine power that, although it flows through us, comes from beyond us.

SPIRIT-FILLED

The second experience is that of Elizabeth being "filled with the Holy Spirit" and discerning that her cousin Mary was to bear the long-awaited Messiah. And the third experience is similar: Simon is "inspired by the Spirit" and recognizes the newborn baby as the Christ (2:23-32). The experience in both these incidents is an understanding, a revelation, that also comes from beyond.

One thing characterizes each of these three people: they were receptive to God's Spirit. If we are receptive to the Spirit, we too can receive divine power and understanding from beyond ourselves.

Jersey breeders honored at annual awards banquet

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

MEADVILLE — The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club last weekend in Meadville featured many outstanding families, herds, and juniors. From the crowning of the Jersey Queen to the production awards and the recognition of outstanding service to the breed, the annual meeting was filled with a wealth of Jersey achievements.

The Distinguished Service Award for 1986 was presented by Chuck Moose, New Wilmington, to two breeders. When deciding on which couple was to receive the recognition, the committee reached an impasse and decided to honor couples who have dairy farmed since the 1940's.

The Hillcrest Farm of John and Blanche Hoye, Volant, and the Spring Run Farm of Dick and Kate Moose are well known throughout the state and also recognized nationally. Although retired from dairying now, farm names are still recognized on some of the best cows of the breed.

Both couples have helped other dairymen and numerous 4-Hers to step into the Jersey breed and their advice and help was well appreciated through the years.

John and Blanche Hoye were instrumental for the start in dairying of John McConnell, their son-in-law, who currently farms on the home farm.

Dick and Kate Moose, owners of the highest milking herd in the state for several years, helped their son, Gerald, current owner of Overnight Jerseys, and their nephew, Dean, currently farming on their home farm, into a great beginning in the Jersey breed.

When presenting the award, Chuck Moose concluded, "Both couples are well deserving of the Distinguished Service award."

A relatively new but widely coveted award was again given to a herd that had to meet high criteria. The Genetic Improvement Award is sponsored each year by the Norman Family of Liberty in memory of their relatives who started them in the Jersey business.

The award requires a herd to use 20 percent young sires as service sires in their herd, and must be at least 80 percent homebred. The award is given to the herd with the highest average cow index in the state after meeting these criteria.

Presented by David Norman, Liberty, the award was given to Dr. Robert and Helene Dreisbach and their daughters, Patty and Carol, Hamburg, who own and operate the Longmeadows Farm Jerseys. Their average cow index increased from a plus 8 in 1984 to a plus 28 in 1985. The entire Dreisbach family was on hand to receive the award.

Production awards were topped by the herd of David Reusing, Meadville, who managed his 22 cow herd to the high milk average of 15,173 pounds, with 658 pounds fat and 550 pounds protein. He also received the award for the highest protein average.

Vantage Jerseys, Fredonia, came in second place for milk and protein production with 14,288 M and 654 F, and 524 protein. Owned by Donald and Angie Koontz, the 95 cows of the Vantage herd are milked in a freestall and parlor setup. The 40 cows of William R. Yoder, Meyersdale, took high fat production honors with 661 pounds of fat, 12,996 pounds milk and 497 pounds protein. Awards for high milk, fat and protein production were given to producers to herd size and individual cow production awards will be given later in the year.

The new Jersey Queen, Beth Warner, assisted in the presentations of the awards. Crowned Friday evening as the junior to represent the Jersey breed this

Receiving the Distinguished Service award were two well known Jersey couples. Dick and Kate Moose, (left) New Wilmington, are congratulated by Chuck Moose. Also receiving the award was John and Blanche Hoye, Volant. With them is club president Chuck Rhein (far right).

Jersey bred heifer sale tops $1,200

MERCER — Prices remained steady as 28 bred heifers and nine calves were paraded before Jersey breeders for their bids at the annual bred heifer and calf sale of the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club (PJCC). The sale was held on Friday, April 11th, at the Mercer County 4-H Park, Mercer, Pa. Held in conjunction with the PJCC Annual Meeting in Meadville the following day, the sale ended with an average of $839.28 on the stylish bred heifers and $552.77 on the showy calves.

The high bid of the sale was shared by two consignments with each selling for $1200. The consignment of Jesse R. Moore, Volant, brought top price on the final bid of Dean Moose, New Wilmington. GR Ladybug Saint Chic, sired by Favorite Saint, is due in May to Magic of Ogston, one of the high TPI bulls of the breed. Also enhancing her value was the consistently high production of her dam, a Quicksilver Noble daughter with records to 17,746 M and 833 F.

Sharing the limelight was the consignment of Thomas Eliason, Harrington, DE, Kalmar Winchester Meghen. This heifer is due in July to a fancy Canadian son of Quicksilver. "Meghen", sired by an unproven son of Milknhoney General, featured a high testing Samson dam with tests to 6.5%. She was purchased by Lester and Ruth Martin, Chambersburg.

The high selling entry of the calf sale was the consignment from the Moose family of Romar Farm, New Wilmington. Romar Bruce Lace brought $685 on the final bid of James E. Andrew, Espyville. A daughter of Mayfield Volunteer Bruce, Romar Bruce Lace also featured a high producing dam with records to 14,760 M and 655 F.

Second high seller was the consignment of Thomas Sanderson, Conneaut Lake. Purchased for $675 by Shelby Sommers, Conneautville, the Nippersink daughter featured a high producing dam.

Volume buyer of the sale was Kenneth E. Rummell, Alliance. He purchased eight bred heifers for the total price of $6,420 to begin a Jersey herd in Ohio. Brass Bell Jerseys of Enon Valley added three new calves for $1470 to their stock as the volume buyer for the calf sale.

Brass Bell Jerseys also purchased the second high selling animal of the bred heifer sale for $1075. Valley-U Volunteer Cora, the consignment of Robert Ulrich, Quarryville, featured a plus proven sire and a dam with production over 14,000 M and tests up to 5.3%. The heifer was due in June to A-Nine Top Brass.

Auctioneer for the sale was Lloyd Braham and announcement of the pedigrees was handled by Don Koontz, Mercer.

Also selling the $1200 was the consignment of William Eliason, DE (left). Don McClelland is at the halter. Lester Martin, Chambersburg is the buyer.

MEADVILLE — The genetic advancement of the breed, top producing herds, and resolutions concerning the current dairy situation took top priority at the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club held last weekend at the Quality Inn, Meadville.

Beginning on Friday, April 11th, with the Bred Heifer and Calf Sale in Mercer, the weekend gathering of over 100 Jersey breeders continued with the crowning of a new Jersey Queen, youth awards, production awards, and the annual business meeting on Saturday. Featured speaker for the event was Cari Wolfe, Somerset Area Representative of the American Jersey Cattle Club.

"We are fortunate to be identified with the breed of dairy cattle that provides us endless opportunities," Wolfe began in her presentation to Jersey breeders. But, she reminded dairymen that, "We need to challenge her efficiency."

Wolfe cited "profitable production" as a key to success and stated "ration formulation is critical to profits."

"A guess as to what your herd needs is a far cry to a planned approach to feeding," she stated. "The information is out there, if not utilized," the enthusiastic Wolfe added, "you're missing an opportunity on what these Jersey cows can really do."

Wolfe listed production testing (DHIA), ration formulation, and sire selection as the steps towards progress within a herd.

"Pick the best bulls available," she encouraged. "If you're doing anything right, your heifers should be better than the cows you're milking now," she stated. She also added, "Young sires need to be sampled...this helps provide the choices for the future."

An advocate of young sire sampling, Wolfe had spoken to a small group of breeders on Friday evening about the possibility of forming a Pennsylvania-based young sire sampling group.

Wolfe was instrumental in organizing Dixieland Sires, a recently formed young sire sampling organization of breeders in the Southeast. Dixieland Sires currently involves 45 herds in eight different states with over 7000 cows. They are currently sampling seven young bulls and working with A.I. organizations for the collecting, housing, and semen distribution in order to provide an adequate repeatability on a wider year, Beth spoke to the large gathering of Jersey breeders and juniors. The 16 year old youth stated that her sister, Melinda, and her own 20 registered Jerseys that are currently "a part of my parent's generic herd." "They have provided me with an investment for the future," she added. Beth's parents are James and Nellie Warner, Columbia Cross Roads, and own a small herd of Holsteins. Beth is a junior at Troy High School and plans to attend college after graduation and major in psychology. She was crowned by the 1985 Jersey Queen, Carol Hobaugh.

Junior awards were also presented. The winners of the Brunges Memorial Award were: Lisa Chapman for Windy Acres Saint Doria production of FCM milk 18,286 pounds; second place, Pamela McConnell with Advancing Taffy Toni with 16,371 pounds FCM; third place, Marsha Ann Chess with VanDe MPQ Sandy Lilac with 16,331 pounds FCM; fourth, Melanie Dietrich with Midnight Dorina of Carrock with 15,956 pounds FCM; fifth place, Carolyn Norman with Normandell Sequel Gwen with 15,619 pounds FCM; sixth place, Michael Lusk with Baronets Golden Treasure with 14,793 pounds FCM; and eighth place, Michelle Lusk with Superbs Roasted Peanut with 13,286 pounds FCM.

Lisa Chapman also received the Fetterhof Trophy. The Scrapbook award went to Christopher Zagrodnichek in the 8 to 14 year old division, and the First Year Project award went to Pamela McConnell. The calf donated each year by Frederick Farm, Bedford, to a deserving Jersey junior, was won by Kimberly Miller.

In presenting the numerous juniors with their awards after a busy year of activities, Youth Director, Lori Sollenberger, Everett, praised them for a winning year. "We had the largest state junior show ever in September," Sollenberger recalled. She also added that there were several juniors winning national scholarships this year.

The 1985 All-American Jersey Show in Louisville, Kentucky, placed the Pennsylvania Junior herd as the sixth state herd in the nation. The highest placing received to date at that show. Sollenberger noted the efforts of the junior club leaders and concluded to the breeders to remember the state Jersey Queen. "Let her represent the breed for you," Sollenberger stated.

base of the breed's best bulls.

More than just another A.I. organization, Wolfe stated that the group "has a little different motivation for success. We want to improve the breed instead of just make money."

With Wolfe's encouragement and guidance on how to start such an organization with the minimum of investment by breeders, over 20 breeders expressed an interest in forming a Pennsylvania group. A committee was formed and scheduled to meet later in the year.

As Wolfe concluded her presentation at the annual meeting, she expressed appreciation for the interest in her young sire sampling data. She ended with a challenge for breeders, "Your challenges today will be your opportunities for success. Be aware of what is around you and capitalize it to your best advantage."

As the annual meeting progressed, several resolutions coming through committee and from the floor expressed the feelings of Jersey breeders, and were unanimously adopted by the membership.

The resolutions adopted signaled the support of the PJCC for: 1.- The limitation of Canadian imports during the buyout program; 2.- The slaughter of cows in an orderly manner to have as little an impact as possible on prices; 3.- The encouragement of the membership for the support of Project Equity; 4.- An organized young sire sampling approach to proving more of the breeds best bulls; and 5.- The opposition to government subsidizing foreign dairy investors.

Outgoing President Craig Rhein, Pine Grove, officiated during the election of the new officers. David Norman, Liberty, will succeed Rhein as president. John McConnell, Volant, will become first vice president, and Leon Sollenberger, Everett, will be the second vice president. Florence Robinson, Waynesboro, will keep her position as secretary-treasurer.

Junior production awards, and senior awards followed the business meeting. Several of the award winners were viewed that morning as farm tours highlighted the morning hours.

Buses carried visitors to the 130 cow Jersey dairy farm of Tom and Carolyn Sanderson, Conneaut Lake. Over three years ago this herd was predominantly Holstein. Through purchases at the Pennsylvania Bred Heifer sale each year, Sanderson turned his black and white herd into one of the largest all Jersey herds in the state.

From the Sanderson spread, visitors viewed the state's highest producing Jersey herd. Dave and Donna Reusing, Meadville, own and operate New Hope Farm and their 20 cow herd of Jerseys. Their production for 1985 stands at 15,173 M and 658 F with three times a day milking. Cows are kept in the barn 22 hours per day and fed corn silage, hay and grain according to production. All grain and most of the silage is purchased and Reusing makes his own hay. A Westfalia Visaton milking system is used.

The top producing herd at Spruce Row Jerseys was also seen. Managed by Jeff and Janet Peters, the herd has been established since the early 1900's and Peters has managed it since 1981. Since that time, with a RHA of 9,000 milk, the herd has increased production over 15,000 on two times a day milking. The March RHA stood at 2x56 cows, 15,573M 714F and 568P.

Ardrossan Ayrshires

Born in Scotland and raised in America

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

VILLANOVA — The year was 1910. And in the village of Bryn Mawr, on the outskirts of Philadelphia, a freight train pulled into the station. In a short time, a group of Ayrshire cattle was herded from a boxcar and out into the street.

It was near the end of the long journey for these traveled cows. They had earlier been driven from barns at Ardrossan, Scotland, and loaded onto a ship headed for America. When the ship finally docked at its destination, the cattle had then been transferred to the freight boxcar for the next leg of their journey.

Local residents Colonel Robert L. Montgomery and John Valentine had waited with eager anticipation for the arrival of their red and white bovine purchases. With plenty of hands to help with the herding, the cattle were directed down Bryn Mawr's main street and the remaining five miles to where soft straw beds, grassy hay and sturdy southeast Pennsylvania fieldstone barns awaited their arrival.

Nine of those cows and a young sire named White Robin went to the rolling estate pastures of Col. Montgomery. The son of a lawyer, and one of 11 children, Col. Montgomery had served the country through both the Spanish-American War and World War. He was a production-side aviation specialist and a flier, whose interests ranged from the technology of autogyro flying machines to breeding fine cattle and horses.

It was the latter interest that had initiated the shipment of Ayrshires. About the same time, Col. Montgomery had also imported six three-quarter-bred Irish mares and a Thoroughbred stud. Before long, Colonel Montgomery's three daughters were kept busy breaking and training the young horses.

Progressive thinking marked the agricultural philosophy of Col. Montgomery, who had as a civilian become a successful investment broker. Diseases ran rampant through herds of domestic livestock, and Col. Montgomery was determined to protect his horse and cattle herds.

In his farsightedness, he had purchased land which included many springs of fresh, clear water. Knowing that diseases could be transmitted by other animals drinking from upstream, Col. Montgomery ran all water crossing his property, but originating elsewhere, through underground piping systems. Only water originating on his property was used.

It was a strategy that may have paved the way toward establishing Ardrossan as a bastion of Ayrshire breeding. John Valentine's cows all died, primarily to that dreaded scourge of cattle, tuberculosis. Of Col. Montgomery's original Ayrshire imports, only one was lost.

"Father had very pronounced ideas about health requirements. No animal that left the property could ever come back," relates the daughter of the Ayrshire importer, Mrs. Hope Montgomery Scott. She and her husband, Edgar, have continued the family's Ayrshire cattle breeding.

In fact, under the Scott's direction, Ardrossan Farms has developed in production and type a herd considered by many in the industry as the top Ayrshire breeding operation in the United States.

Today, the 115-head herd has a rolling average of 19,533 milk and 805 fat. And production continues to climb, with the breaking of the 20,000-pound herd average barrier a real possibility for the first time in Ayrshire breed history.

Ayrshire breeders from across the country, attending the National Ayrshire convention this week at Grantville, will tour Ardrossan Farms. They'll visit this outstanding herd of cattle, view the picturesque rolling hills and pastures and enjoy a picnic on the spacious lawn of the estate's main house.

But record-setting production and type were not always the hallmark of this herd. Had it not been for the interest of Mrs. Scott, a vital part of Ayrshire history might have been lost.

These are the nine original cows at Ardrossan Farms that were imported from Scotland. They were the foundation for the herd that is on the threshold of a 20,000 pound herd average.

The Ardrossan herd has basically been developed through a line-breeding philosophy, coupled with the genetics of outcross sires blended with herd bloodlines to maintain strengths and upgrade developing faults. In those early years, new sires continued to be imported from top Scottish breeders. Later, as more domestic herds developed outstanding stock, top bulls were acquired from across the country.

About 1921, a fire destroyed the barn where the Ardrossan herd was housed. Animals were moved across the hill to the site where they are still tended in meticulously-kept stanchion barns.

Years later, Col. Montgomery's health was faltering and he had experienced strokes. Herd quality and production were declining. Mrs. Scott had grown up helping with the family's horses, and had taken an interest in the cattle somewhat, as well.

"I just like all animals," she smiles. Her father didn't necessarily agree with her girlhood interest in the herd.

"He told me that was not for a woman to do," adds Mrs. Scott.

In 1948, when she began working in earnest with the Ardrossan herd, an Ayrshire friend who looked over the cattle called them "the most neglected herd he'd ever seen."

The herd of 180 head was then producing a yearly average of 6,000 pounds milk and 307 pounds of fat.

"I really didn't know where to turn for help," Mrs. Scott recalls. "But I decided that if a cow hadn't made 7,000 pounds after three lactations, she would have to go. The first time one produced over 500 pounds of fat I was staggered."

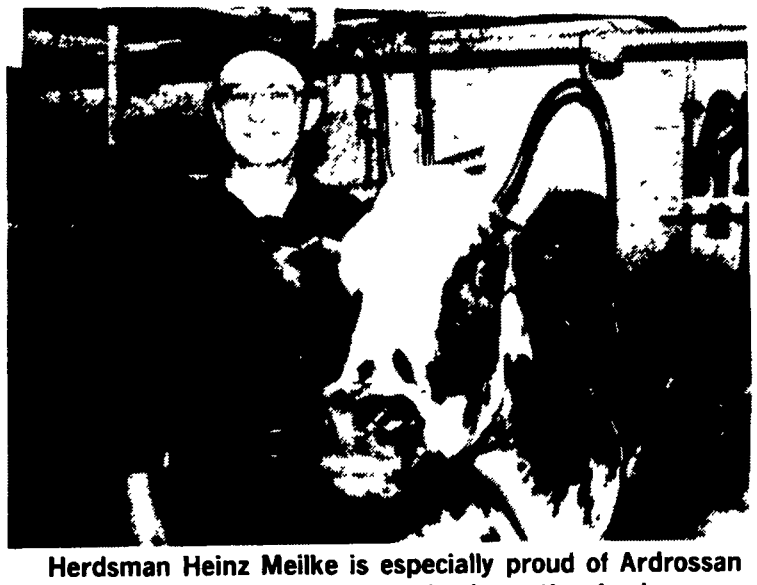
After just two years under her direction, the herd average had doubled. And, by 1950-51, Ardrossan Farms had become the first certified TB and Brucellosis-free herd in the nation.

She is quick to offer credit to others. Dr. Ernest Duebler, a veterinarian who had helped care for her father's herd, and his son James, were among her early advisors. "He urged me to make up a book of the cow families, in addition to the other cattle records I was keeping. And I was still continuing to break horses as well."

Her husband also earns Mrs. Scott's praise for his support and interest, as does her brother. In fact, it was Mr. Scott who insisted that "you must have a good bull."

"And it was at a time when we had been losing a thousand dollars a month on the herd; pretty soon I was doubling that monthly loss," she laughs. But, that was because equipment all needed upgrading and barn repair work done.

Temperament of the herd left something to be desired, too, she relates. Some of the cattle were so high-strung that at milking time, their back legs were sometimes secured from kicking by a string tied to the leg and fastened to a stall across the center alleyway.



Herdsman Heinz Meilke is especially proud of Ardrossan RC More Sun. She was number in the nation for her age, making a 2-6 305-day lactation of 22,870 milk, 4.4 test, and 1015 fat.

Then, Homerun Martyr moved in with the herd. This first outstanding herd sire provided solid breeding foundation stock to help upgrade the Ardrossan bloodlines. He was followed by Blackwood Warbeau, acquired from breeder Cuthbert Nairn. Interestingly, Nairn had been among those on hand in 1910 to help move the original nine Ayrshire cows down the Bryn Mawr streets to the Montgomery barn.

A third foundation sire at Ardrossan was Reidina Double Dawn, loaned from veterinarian Dr. Deubler. An outstanding bull for both milk and fat, Double Dawn sired the first 20,000-pound producer in the Ardrossan herd.

Goals at Ardrossan have continued leading toward improvement of production and type. That these goals are being met are evidenced by the five top herd producers up for association recognition for records of over 25,000, and the 27 Excellents and many Very Good individuals in this herd brimming with size, strength and outstanding udders.

Success of the herd has been largely built on the foundation of deep-pedigreed, homebred cow families. Coupled with that is the dedication, management abilities, and cow breeding "sense" of Mrs. Scott and her intensely-loyal and hardworking staff.

An incredible amount of respect is evident between employees and employer at Ardrossan. Mrs. Scott's appreciation of her staff is obvious, and they are equally quick to credit her for her knowledge and dedication to the herd.

"Without Mrs. Scott, this wouldn't happen," they say, adding that this admiring and respectful relationship between staff and owner carries over to the calm demeanor of this herd.

Farm manager is Chet Billhime, who's been at Ardrossan for 28 years. In addition to his farm management responsibilities, he helps milk the herd, freshens out all the cattle, and with his wife Helen, raises all the calves from weaning age to about six months.

Masonic Homes

Their herd comes doctor recommended

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

ELIZABETHTOWN — Traveling around Masonic Homes gives the impression of stepping back in time. The rolling hillsides, picturesque gardens and stone buildings are reminiscent of an earlier time when cows were hand milked and surplus production was unheard of.

It was in this earlier time that the Masonic Homes Ayrshires originated. In 1913, shortly after the Homes opened their doors, they started the registered Ayrshire herd that is now recognized as one of the herds in the state.

Ayrshire was the breed of choice for Masonic Homes due to the characteristic small fat globules found in their milk. This trait made the milk easier to digest and it was considered ideal for the older resident at the Homes by doctors at the time.

The Freemasons purchased nearly 1,700 acres in 1908 near Elizabethtown. Here they established and have continually operated a home for elderly Freemasons, their wives, widows and children.

"The farms serve as a support function, providing foodstuffs and the aesthectics of good open surroundings for the Homes," Gerald Tracy, general farm manager of Masonic Homes Farm said. "A large portion of what is produced here is consumed here," Tracy continued.

Masonic Homes is divided into eight different production centers; dairy, beef, poultry, swine, orchards, vegetables, crops and landscaping. Each production area has a budget and is responsible for producing a product in a competitive manner.

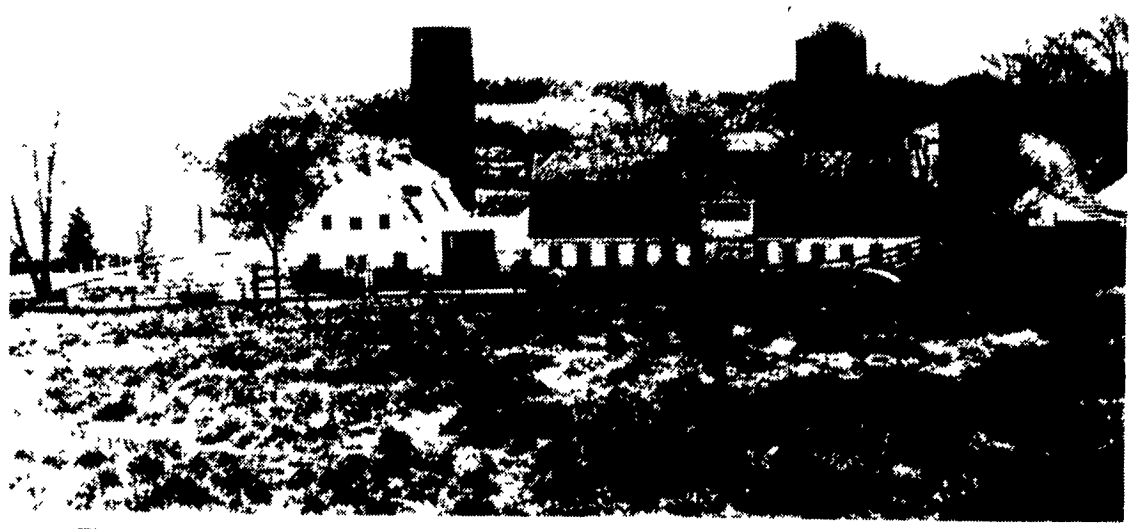
Each area also has a full time supervisor who watches the cost of production closely Tracy explained. These supervisor do not work eight to five and are available when the animals are in need, including late in the evening.

The supervisor for the dairy, Albert "Barney" Wilson, also serves as the assistant general farm manager. Wilson closely watches this outstanding herd to keep their production up to its current level. These cows have been under his exclusive care for 16 years, and he has worked full-time at the Homes for the past 31 years.

The bulk of this herd is housed in a modern freestall barn. A maternity barn, three heifer barns, a conventional tie stall barn, and a bull barn are also used to provide the optimum care and attention possible.

Older cows that require a greater amount of attention and first calf heifers that have recently calved are housed in a single row stanchion barn.

These cows are fed hay and corn silage which is top dressed with a custom blended grain ration. The forages are routinely tested and the grain mix is then balanced accordingly. A TMR feeding program is used in the bunk of the freestall barn.



The main barn at Masonic Homes houses the milking herd and young calves. This pasture is used for the older cows requiring more attention and first calf heifers.

A tie stall barn, which is adjacent to the freestall barn, is used to milk. The herd is grouped into a high and low production group and fed accordingly.

The dry cows are fed a separate ration until about two weeks prior to calving. At this point they are moved to the maternity pens where their feed is gradually adjusted to the ration fed to the milking string.

Feeding the dry cows like this "has eliminated many problems for us," Wilson noted. Mastitis was virtually eliminated by treating the udder when the cows are dried off, Wilson added.

With the maternity pens the cows can be watched closely since farm personnel frequently travel through the stanchion barn where the pens are located. The success of these pens is illustrated by their low calf mortality rate.

"In 16 years we haven't lost a calf after it has been taken off the cow," Wilson noted.

The calves are raised in three age groups in three separate barns. They are bred either by natural services or through A.I., depending on the type of mating Wilson is looking to make. Since the heifer facilities are not geared to restraining them for A.I., the natural service is more conveinent method in the heifer barn.

All of the bulls used at Masonic Homes are registered, and not just kept to settle hard breeders Tracy explained.

One of the bull presently on the farm is Cove Creek Sampson, purchased from the Sam Diehl herd in Bedford. His daughters are currently in their second lactation and are doing very well according to Wilson.

They support the Pennsylvania young sire program by using these bulls that are housed at a nearby A.I. stud. They have also assisted by housing a sire in waiting for the program.

To achieve a better outcrossing of their bloodlines, Wilson uses many Canadian bulls in his breeding program.

The Hi-Kick bull, who was developed at Masonic Homes, has produced the most productive cow families, Wilson proudly explained. Convention tour visitors will have the opportunity to view offsprings of the various bulls used at the Homes. Wilson plans to have two daughters of the main bulls they have used over the years on display.

Masonic Homes breeding and feeding program has produced a herd that has a mature equivalent with twice a day milking of 14,585 pounds of milk, 576 pounds of fat, and 475 pounds of protein on 120 milking cows.

The herd is kept on this schedule of production with two veterinarians. One is a reproduction specialist who visits every two weeks to check on pregnancies. With these frequent visits he can quickly detect any reproduction abnormalities before they develop into severe problems.

An animal health vet is employed as needed and to handle such duties as testing and vaccinations. Two years ago they added vaccinating against rabies to this schedule as a precaution. When they started this program, rabies outbreaks were occuring with regularity in the area.

This herd can proudly report that they have always been certified and accredited.

Any herd that has withstood the test of time and prospered is doing things correctly and moving in the right direction. The combination of the various management practices at Masonic Homes has produced a herd that "speaks for itself by doing well for others," Tracy said.

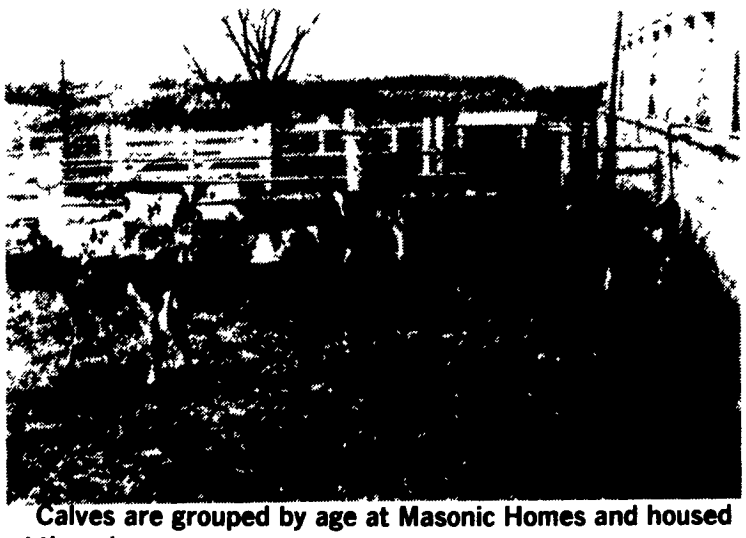
"We normally don't advertise other than in connection with sales since we are here to serve the guests," Tracy continued. Every year they sell animals to 4-Hers, FFAers and other Ayrshire enthusiasts who have learned about this herd by word of mouth.

The National Sale on Friday April 25 features Masonic Homes C.C.S. Neat. This two year old consignment was sired by Cove Creek Sampson and her dam produced over 16,000 of 4.2 percent milk as a two year old.

This farm, while unique in its surroundings, stone buildings, diversified productions centers, and as a showplace for the many visitors that pass through its gates, has the same goals as any other commercial dairy operation. It is constantly evaluating and making appropriate changes to continually improve.

Convention goers will find many appealing things at Masonic Homes Farm, from the aesthectics of the landscapes to the beauty of the stylish cows, that will provide fuel for conversation through the remainder of their trip.

Turn of the century stonework is illustrated on the creamery which has been converted to the milkhouse.



Calves are grouped by age at Masonic Homes and housed at three barns.

The bull barn (left) is home to three registered sires used at the Homes. Directly behind this is the dry cow barn and exercise lot.

Albert "Barney" Wilson proudly looks over the newborn calf from the Canadian bull Amigo. The dam "Rachael" was sired by Cove Creek Sampson, a registered bull owned by Masonic Homes.

herd manager for the past 11 years, including the breeding work and bulk of the herd mating decisions.

"The Ayrshire is the smartest breed of cow," figures Mielke, who has worked with four of the major dairy breeds. "She's real sensitive and remembers people very well. A lot of people say Ayrshires are high strung. I say they're more alert."

Devoted care of these animals begins with manager Chet Billhime, who quickly moves newborn calves into the calf nursery, or "Edgar's Barn." It earned that name when Mr. Scott had it built for his wife as a birthday gift.

This metal pole building offers a unique environment for baby calves, a sort of enclosed protection but with the light and fresh air feeling of outdoors. Twenty individual wire mesh pens hold heifer calf replacements and baby bulls destined for A.I. use. Ten pens line each wall for two weeks. Then, each line of pens is moved to the middle of the concrete floor of the light, airy facility. The old location is cleaned, and disinfected, and in two more weeks the pens are moved back, for a constant two-week rotation of pens to prevent possible disease buildup.

Only fresh, whole milk is used for calf feeding - no replacer, and no antibiotic-treated milk. When too many heifers were freshening with mastitis, Mrs. Scott feared that it was directly related to treated milk fed to them as calves. With the use of only fresh whole milk for the calves, mastitis in two-year-olds has ceased to be a problem.

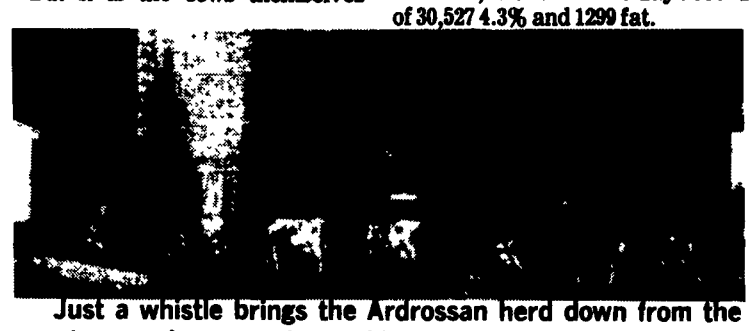
Calves also get Agway's 19 percent protein TCR mix until they reach about 300 pounds, when they're switched to the TCR-2 grower. Pasturing outside on every fit day and plenty of grassy, green hay keeps heifers growing under the watchful care of the Billhimes.

At about 16 months, depending on size, heifers are pasture bred, using two or three selected young bulls. About ten percent of the heifers are A.I. mated to top breed bloodline sires. Aim is to maintain the outstanding size on this herd and to freshen in the 2 year-4 month area.

Meticulous attention is paid to milking equipment and techniques. A Universal system, with a backup in case of malfunction, runs the eight units, and a special thermometer-like gauge monitors vacumn levels at all times. An extremely low leucocyte count testifies to the attention paid to the smallest details.

But it is the cows themselves that star at Ardrossan, powerful, typey, individuals with the will to produce both milk and fat.

Top in the nation for her age is Ardrossan RC More Sun, with a first lactation at 2-06 305d 22,870 4.4 percent and 1015 fat. Next to her in the stall is the EX-90 Classic Perlina. By Oak Ridge Flashy Classic, she's high fat producer in the herd, with a 7-09 305 day record of 30,527 4.3% and 1299 fat.



Just a whistle brings the Ardrossan herd down from the pasture and across the parking area to the stall barn for milking time.

Herb Myer plows new ground in tillage field ground for the past decade.

Although the idea hasn't been embraced by the farming community as yet, Myer insists that he wouldn't have stayed with it for so long if it hadn't produced what he feels are dramatic results.

Just what has slit tillage done for Myer? In addition to being a time saver, the system has practically eliminated erosion while improving his soil's texture. And Myer claims that he's saved money while accomplishing all this.

To get the job done, Myer uses a modified Brillion chisel plow. About a dozen years ago, when he bought the unit, he removed half the teeth and replaced the curved chisel shovels on the remaining five shanks with narrow, two-inch teeth. He then fitted a heavy-duty disk coulter in front of the unit that serves to guide the teeth and cut up surface residue. The modified unit cuts five slits in the soil 30 inches apart and about 12 to 15 inches deep. Between each pair of slits a low ridge is formed by the soil that is thrown to the side by the chisel teeth.

After harvesting his corn, Myer pulls the chisel through the field so that each tooth cuts a slit between corn rows. The soil is not disturbed until planting time, when a light disk or harrow is used to round off the ridges created by the chisel. The result is a field of low, undulating ridges between the slits that have become partially filled with soil and crop residue.

Myer then plants his corn with a no-till planter. Although he tries to keep his corn rows basically on top of the ridges, no harm is done if some of the seed winds up in the slits.

Myer points out that it's easy to see why slit tillage is more effective in stopping erosion and runoff than either conventional plowing and disking or no-till planting. Using traditional tillage methods, loose soil is tilled on top of packed soil. This loose surface soil is particularly vulnerable to sheet erosion during heavy rains. And while no-till planting does reduce soil loss, the packed surface does little to keep water from heading downhill.

On the other hand, slit tillage incorporates the best of both worlds—a few inches of loose soil on either side of the slit, and packed soil in between. And once rain water hits the low ridge crests between the slits, it can travel no more than 15 inches in either direction before coming to a slit. Once it flows into a slit, the water is exposed to a large amount of surface area along the walls on either side. The result is that water never has the opportunity to build up enough speed to wash soil, and all water is absorbed in the vicinity of where it originally fell.

Myer claims that the slits are so effective at halting the movement of water across the surface that he can haul manure all winter without fear of it washing away. He does acknowledge that the slits' effectiveness may be reduced somewhat with time's passage. The openings gradually become filled with soil and organic matter, and the light disking at planting time also helps to fill them in. "But I wouldn't be afraid to get 10 inches of rain right after I put them in," he says.

"The main reason I did it was to prevent erosion," says the Lampeter-area farmer, who maintains that not a single erosion gully has appeared on his four to eight-degree slopes since he started using slit tillage. He's also pleased to report that slit tillage results in fuel savings and less wear and tear on equipment, since his modified chisel has only half of its original shanks cleaving the ground.

As the years passed, though, Myer began to notice yet another apparent benefit: the texture of his soil was improving. He reasons that since the narrow chisel teeth bring very little soil to the surface, subsoil is not mixed with topsoil.

As a young farmer, Myer explains, he was taught to bring up a small amount of subsoil, or clay, when plowing. The problem with

Grace tops Maryland Show for second championship

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

TIMONIUM, MD — "Grace" did it again. This time she did it at the Maryland State Holstein Show.

Savage-Leigh E-Star Grace was the grand champion at two shows last week. Her first was on Wednesday at the North American Spring Show in Springfield, MA. Three days later she stood the winner's circle again, this time in her home state of Maryland.

"Grace's" victory came as no surprise to those who have been following her tanbark trail victories. Last year she stood in the reserve position at this show, and spectators were commenting that she looked better than ever.

Her victories started last November at the Western National Show in California where she was named Grand Champion.

This five-year-old cow, fresh since July, is still pumping out 65 pounds a day. She recently classified EX-92 and is from four generations of Savage-Leigh breeding. Included among her honors is an All-American nomination last year.

"This year she is coming back and going strong," owner Wayne Savage notes. Wayne owns "Grace" in partnership with his father Melvin, and his brother Dennis. Last year they sold half interest in this Thonyma E-Star daughter to the Lylehaven Farm from Vermont.

"We are especially grateful to Lylehaven for the national exposure they have gotten for us." Cindee Savage, Wayne's wife explained. She also credited fitter Tim Coon with making "Grace" look her best. "Tim went to every show 'Grace' was at and knows her from head to tail," she added.

Coming in the Reserve Grand Champion position was the three-year old, Walkup Sir Chris Crystal - ET, owned by Fair Hill Farm, Chestertown, MD.

This champion, sired by Browndale Sir Christopher, is out of a 94 point Astronaut daughter.

"This is the best young cow we own right now," Peter Morris, herdsman at Fairhills commented. Morris also noted that they are "shooting for the All-Maryland award and maybe more."

"This cow has a beautiful udder and walks on a good set of hind legs," judge Dennis Patrick, Kempton, PA noted. Morris added that she is an easy cow to show since "she show herself and is just an impressive individual."

Noting that this is the first top individual Fair Hills has shown in several years, Morris added, "We aren't worried about records, right now we are just going to have fun showing."

The junior championship of the open show went to Peace and Plenty Tempo Vanla Vala, owned by Gus Schwartzbeck. "You never know. We didn't expect to do this well," Joe Schwartzbeck father of Gus and President of the Maryland Association stated.

Schwartzbeck also commented on the large number of entries from across the state. "Everyone sees a good one in their herd and they come out. They are a good bunch of people and no one know who will win. It keeps things interesting."

The reserve junior title went Bowen-Vale Simon Lassie owned by Stone Haven Acres and sired by Harmony-Corners Simon-Twin.

The Grand Champion of the junior show was Chestnuts Rorae Joann. This four-year-old cow, owned by Samuel Davis, Earleville, was sired by Round Oak Apple Elevation.

Reserve Champion honors went to another four-year old Peace and Plenty Fal Nancy, owned by Shane Schwartzbeck. This Brookfield Falcon daughter produced 21,230 pounds of milk with a 4.1 percent test as a three-year old.

Premier Breeder and Premier Exhibitor awards returned to Coldsprings Farm owned by the Marlin Hoff family, New Windsor. This is the second consecutive year

GRATE CLEANER AND FLOOR SWEEPER

...Saves Time And Labor In Barn Management.

Dairymen recognize that the use of gutter grates is an efficient method to help keep dairy cows clean. Unfortunately, there has been no practical way to properly clean grates until the introduction of Clean-N-Sweep by Van Dale.

The Clean-N-Sweep from Van Dale is the convenient, efficient method to clean gutter grates. Forcing manure downward between the gutter grates, the Clean-N-Sweep cleans the top surface and sides of the grates and helps to prevent manure build-up. Water or mist attachments are not needed for excellent cleaning. The powerful engine and rugged design of the Clean-N-Sweep assure long lasting performance, while its efficient operation saves time and labor. Your barn grates are kept in a clean condition, and your cows remain cleaner, too.

Meet outstanding Ayrshire boy finalist, Wesley Harding

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LEBANON — When Wesley Harding, Jr. decided to join the Future Farmers of America, he wanted to add a little color to his family's Holstein herd, and persuaded his father to allow him to get an Ayrshire. With reservations, the senior Wesley Harding agreed, and now Wesley, Jr., has a herd of 15 Ayrshires and has been named one of six finalists in the national Ayrshire Distinguished Junior Member contest.

Why did he want to make the switch? Wesley recalls, "I could get a more quality animal for less money." He has been consistently pleased with the Ayrshires he has acquired, saying they have picked up the butterfat in the herd, and they have all been calm to work with. He has also experienced few Health problems with his Ayrshires. He was helped in his early decisions by neighbor Dale Maulfair, a long-time Ayrshire breeder.

A 1985 graduate of Northern Lebanon High School, Harding works full time with his father on their "Justa Farm" north of Lebanon. Counting project animals of the other Harding children, Laura and Chris, the herd now numbers about 80 head. And his father makes it clear that he has no regrets about bringing in the colored breed.

When asked what he looks for in purchasing additional animals, Harding, Jr., answers, "A little of everything. I like them to milk and I like them to have show qualities - I like to do well in the ring."

It is on the show circuit that Harding has made some lasting friendships, adding that within the Ayrshire breed there is less competition in the show ring and the competitors are friendly. Ayrshires continue to be popular with young people as project animals, and Harding notes that there are always new people joining the club.

Harding has shown at the Farm Show for the past five years and has shown in the All-American Dairy show for two years. Last year at the Lebanon County Fair he showed the grand champion Ayrshire in 4-H and FFA, noting, "It will take a while to top that." Asked whether he continues to show Holsteins in 4-H, Harding says, "I show whatever will do best." He continues to own about ten Holsteins.

Although he has never sold any of his animals, except bull calves, it is one of his goals to consign an animal in a national sale.

The trip to the national Ayrshire convention next week at Grantville will be Harding's second to that event, having traveled two years ago to Ohio. There he participated in the dairy bowl contest, and enjoyed getting to know a wide range of Ayrshire breeders from across the nation.

In addition to the extensive application which Harding filled out as part of the process of being named Pennsylvania Distinguished Junior member, he will also have a personal interview with judges at the convention and show a slide presentation on his dairy activities. Pennsylvania has done well on a national level in the past, and Harding says, "I will try my best."

Harding says the best part about the contest is the "recognition. I am very happy about being a finalist."

In addition to participating in the contest, Harding is looking forward to being a leadsman in the national sale. He says, "It's a chance of a lifetime." He also enjoys going on the scheduled farm visits, saying, "You learn by looking at other operations."

A member of the Norlebco Dairy Club for nine years, and the Northern Lebanon FFA Chapter for five, Harding says his dairy projects have been useful to him. "If nothing else, it got me out and I learned to speak a little better. I also got more familiar with sires."

Harding was a vice-president of the chapter as a senior, and received his Keystone Farmer degree in January. He was chapter star farmer for four years. He traveled to Kansas City to the national convention the year his chapter won the national safety award and the Building Our American Communities award.

Two years ago he won a calf from the Southeast Ayrshire Breeders based on the quality of his project book.

Harding serves as a director on the Southeast Ayrshire breeders group, because they wanted junior representation, and he is a member of the Junior Holstein Club.

Whatever the outcome of next week's contest, Harding will still be found in the barn milking nearly every day. But satisfaction comes from knowing he is one of the best in the nation, and that experience will keep his interest in Ayrshires growing.

Inter-State distributes patronage refund

SOUTHAMPTON — Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative distributed $88,204 in patronage refunds April 15 to over 3,000 members and patrons, according to Treasurer Evan L. Fineman.

The patronage represents 20 percent of Inter-State's allocated income for the 1984-1985 fiscal year. The refund was based on the pounds of milk each member shipped to the cooperative from Aug. 1, 1984, through July 31, 1985.

Since the program began in 1936, Inter-State has returned more than $5.5 million to its members. The cooperative has not missed one of its allocated returns, Fineman said.

Inter-State currently revolves the remaining 80 percent of its patronage refund on a 12-year schedule, payable in September of each year.

this kind of buyout would be worth. That's why you had a tremendous difference iin the bidding figures — from a couple dollars to a thousand dollars. There were no guidelines, no hints. You had to start from your side and make a financial estimate of things. For me it was a matter of looking five years down the road to determine if I was better off to stay in the dairy business or participate in the buyout.

NEWSWANGER - Are you saying that the person who made the bid was the one who took the chance?

MYER - That's right. If you really wanted to participate in the program you didn't want to make your bid too high. On the other hand you didn't want to make it too low and loose a lot of what you could have received. What I did was try to think in terms of the number of dairymen that the government wanted to go out of business and the estimated amount of milk they wanted to go out of production. I did a fair amount of calling around the country talking to extension agents and agricultural leaders to try to get a feel from different parts of the country. I tried to find out what was the expected level of participation. Nobody knew for sure. But it gave me an indication of what I might receive.

On the other hand, you didn't know if the government was going to put a top lid on the bidding or maybe open it up a second time for dairymen to make a bid. The rules of the plan were shared and you could learn what those rules said. But you didn't know what the government was thinking about the value of the bid.

NEWSWANGER - Was there, in your thinking, ethical or moral considerations involved or was this just good business?

MYER - For me, all decisions have moral and ethical implications. And certianly to discontinue the dairy business was a major decision. Yes, I did have quite a bit of reservation about participating in a government program whereby you get paid something that appears to be for nothing. I'm basically opposed to that system of ethics for government. But in this case the reason I was willing to participate was that we know it's costing the government in the area of $17 per hundred pounds to buy up the surplus milk, store and dispose of it. The government wanted dairymen to participate so they could dry up five years of production. On the surface it looked like a hand out, but the government saves a lot of money in the end. It was designed to help and not hurt, so I thought ethically and morally it was OK.

NEWSWANGER - Would you explain how the program is funded? Many people seem to not understand where the money comes from to pay for the program.

MYER - I don't have the percentages clearly in mind but at least initially 40 cents per hundred weight is to come off the price of milk to provide a portion of the money to pay for the program. Of course the government is already funding the milk support price program with billions of dollars each year. Some of the money saved from this program will go into the buyout plan. According to some sources, very little extra money will be needed.

NEWSWANGER - Do you think you are being well paid for your herd? Could you have been paid better?

MYER - There is no way I could have dispersed the herd any other way and got the equivalent. Of course, the restrictions on the farm property for the next five years decreases the value of the farm. But animal for animal, there is no way I could have dispersed the herd for an equal payment.

NEWSWANGER - I know you have some reservations about how this program has been reported in the mass media and to the general public. Would you care to comment on this?

MYER - I thought it was unfortunate that all the dollar facts and figures should be shared with the general public because many of the people can understand dollar values but don't understand the rest of the program. If the public reads information about falrmers who receive thousands of dollars, it appears as a free handout without giving the details of the costs that are involved. It gives an incorrect impression. One factor that should be known is that we must beef an animal no matter how good of a milk cow she may be. We have a cow milking 113 pounds of milk per day and another milking 111 pounds. They're top dairy cows. But they will be sold for hamberger now. In addition, your facilities designed for producing milk must be idle. What do you do with the dairy barn and equipment?

NEWSWANGER - Is there any sentimental attachment involved with your cows?

MYER - Any dairyman knows that if you like dairying you get attached to your animals. You see the bloodlines devleop in cow families for three or four generations. Even calves have sentimental value. All these animals must go for slaughter now.

NEWSWANGER - In your opinion would some other program have been better than a whole herd buyout?

MYER - I think a program that would have limited increases in production fairly on every farm would have taken care of the surplus milk in a matter of time. If that didn't do it, allowing the price of milk to be lowered to meet a true supply and demand situation, would have taken care of the problem.

NEWSWANGER - Will the buyout program achieve it's purpose?

MYER - No, I don't think so. That's why I was interested in it. My feeling is that without a cap on the production and without limiting the import of dairy cattle, the program will not work.

NEWSWANGER - Would you do it again if you had known before you made your bid what you know now?

MYER - Yes. I don't regret being in it. I do regret the way some of the publicity was handled.

Bovine TB incidents on increase in 1985

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The U.S. Department of Agriculture is advising cattle and dairy producers not to become complacent about bovine tuberculosis. Although the incidence of the disease has been reduced dramatically since its peak earlier in this century, recent figures show bovine tuberculosis is reappearing in several states around the country.

"Too many farmers believe tuberculosis in cattle has been eradicated," says Bert W. Hawkins, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. "This chronic and acute infectious disease will continue to be a threat to dairy and beef livestock until the last infected herd has been eliminated."

In 1985, 30 tuberculosis-infected herds, the largest number reported since 1976, were detected in eight states. From 1980 through 1984, an average of only 10 infected herds were found each year nationwide.

Three states, North Carolina, Virginia and New Mexico, last year lost their USDA accreditation as bovine tuberculosis-free. A state loses such accreditation if two or more infected herds are found within its borders within a four-year period. Other infected herds were detected last year in Hawaii, Kansas, Louisiana, Ohio and Texas.

"If the number of TB-infected cattle herds continues to increase," warns Hawkins, "the future looks bleak for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis from the United States."

Near the beginning of this century, bovine tuberculosis was the biggest livestock disease in the country, infecting one in every 20 head of cattle. USDA helped launch an assault on the disease in 1917 with the establishment of the Cooperative State-Federal Bovine Tuberculosis Eradication Program. Systematic testing in each state began in 1924. When an area or county was found to have fewer than one-half of 1 percent infected animals, it was declared "modified accredited tuberculosis free."

By 1940, all states had achieved modified-accredited status. Cattle producers began to believe the costly disease may have been eradicated.

"But many made the mistake of thinking the disease had been conquered once and for all," says Hawkins. "Producers forgot about the need to continue testing."

In the early 1960's, USDA instituted a national slaughter-surveillance traceback program for cattle brucellosis. This program, in which animals exhibiting tuberculosis lesions at slaughter plants are traced to their herds of origin, is today the primary means for detecting infected herds.

Because bovine tuberculosis can have a long incubation period, says Hawkins, a cow purchased today with a latent infection can eventually become a reservoir of infection to other animals even if it shows no signs of the disease. Clinical symptoms may not appear until up to 10 years after initial infection.

"Owners should continue to have their live cattle tested for tuberculosis," Hawkins advises. "It is the most effective way to detect the disease in its early stages, and it is an important tool in controlling the disease given today's practice of mass movement of cattle."

Hawkins urges every cattle producer to follow four steps to prevent further spread of bovine tuberculosis:

1. Have dairy or beef breeding herds tested for TB periodically by an accredited veterinarian.
2. Insist on a negative tuberculin test before buying a replacement animal.
3. Isolate every new replacement animal for 60 days, and have the animal retested for tuberculosis at the end of this period.
4. Make certain all animals sold to slaughter are properly backtagged. If tuberculosis is detected at slaughter, an immediate traceback to the herd of origin will be possible.

"While these procedures may be time-consuming," says Hawkins, "cattle producers should think of them as protecting their income and investment. They're the best insurance against buying an infected animal that could transmit tuberculosis to other animals in the herd."

More time to apply for milk promotion funds

ROBESONIA – Local dairy promotion committee have an extra two weeks to apply for funds from the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, according to PDPP Board Chairman Don Duncan, Robesonia.

The deadline has been extended from April 15 to April 30 at the request of several local committees, said the Berks County dairyman.

A full $35,000 in funds has been approved. The money must be used in the second half of the 1986 calendar year.

Only Pennsylvania groups are eligible for milk promotion dollars, Duncan said.

Radio advertising is limited to $600 per station, he explained, with the local committee picking up 25% of the cost. In addition, only radio ads prepared for the dairy program may be used.

Capital investments for milkshake machines and other dairy-related equipment also get a helping hand, the Board chairman added. PDPP will pay one-fourth the cost up to a maximum of $1,000.

Milk promotion plans and a detailed budget should be sent by April 30 to Cindy Weimer, promotion coordinator, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408. Call (717) 787-6903 for applications. Remember, the deadline is April 30.

that the Hoff family has received these titles.

Hoff, whose 16 head showstring was completely homebred, uses many bulls of his own breeding. Coldspring Ira Kewpie is one of his show cows that carries the Coldspring prefix on both sides of the pedigree.

This aged cow, sired by Coldsprings Ira, won the production award with a record of 32,599 pounds of FCM and 1,167 pounds of fat. She was also Grand Champion of this show two years ago.

Hoff credits his success in the showring to his goal of breeding for correct type as well milk.

PHILCO ENGINE LIFE EXTENDER
PREVENTS THE FORMATION OF SULFURIC ACID IN ENGINES.

There is enough sulfur in 20 gals. of gas and fuel oil to produce 8 oz. of sulfuric acid when combined with moisture and oxygen in engines. This causes harmful gums, varnish and sludge that plugs up carburetors, PCV valves, spark plugs, rings, sticks and burns valves forms abrasive deposits, increases wear, eats away at mufflers and tail pipes, reduces power and fuel efficiency.

For large gas and diesel engines to small lawn mowers and chain saws. Cleans fuel lines, injectors, carburetors, and lubricates upper cylinder area. Users report:

A. 100 to 200% increased spark plug life
B. Up to 100,000 miles without tune up or carburetor job.
C. Improved performance (10 to 15% increased fuel mileage).
D. Quicker starting - means longer starter & battery life.
E. Mufflers, tail pipes & catalytic converters last longer.
F. Increased engine life & lower maintenance cost.

Farmers Union Members Meet USDA Chief

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Pennsylvania Farmers Union members met with the new U.S.D.A. Secretary, Richard Lyng, on April 8 while in town for a two-day lobbying trip.

Members of the general family farm organization discussed a variety of concerns with the Secretary, including:

- Sodbuster regulations which, as currently written, would make the normal soil conservation practice of rotating crops on contour strips a violation leaving a farmer ineligible for participation in farm programs.
- A foreign-owned 10,000 head dairy operation in Georgia, much of which was financed through Georgia's tax exempt bonds.
- The downward effect that the whole-herd buyout dairy program is having on beef prices paid to farmers, due to increased numbers of cows available for slaughter.
- The need to keep milk prices at a fair level for dairy farmers still in production, so they won't need to increase their milk output in order to maintain their cash flow, thereby defeating the purpose of the whole-herd buyout.
- The possibility of a quota system in the dairy industry that would focus milk production on meeting demand instead of producing as much as possible.
- The need to maintain funding for essential agencies, such as the Soil Conservation Service and the Rural Electric Administration.

"We were pleased that the Secretary took the time to speak with us and hear us out," said Pennsylvania Farmers Union President David Stetler, "but we were very disappointed by his apparent unwillingness to answer our questions or even to look into the problems we raised."

When asked if U.S.D.A. could apportion the number of cows going to slaughter under the whole-herd buyout program, the Secretary responded that the government was not in the beef-buying business and that he did not feel he had the authority to intervene.

"The Secretary was given more discretion than ever in the last farm bill," Stetler said. "Surely, he has the authority to make U.S.D.A.'s programs run the way they were intended to and deal with unexpected consequences when they come up."

The Pennsylvania Farmers Union represents family-farmers in 31 chartered counties across the Commonwealth.

Milton Brubaker: 40 years of service to the Ayrshire cow

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

LITITZ — To many, Milton Brubaker's name is synonymous with Pennsylvania Ayrshires.

He has worked with the Ayrshire cow since 1934 and has been active in the association since 1944. He has served the state and southeast associations in every office. Currently Brubaker is secretary-treasurer of the state association.

Brubaker started in the dairy and retail milk business in 1932 by making home deliveries with milk from his herd. This was a common marketing approach and the field was filled with strong competition Brubaker noted.

This competition spurred him to seek a registered breed of cows that would increase his test and provide him with a more marketable product.

At that time northern Lancaster County was not strong in either the Jersey or Guernsey breed, leaving him a choice of Ayrshires or Brown Swiss. His choice of the Ayrshire cow came after viewing the breeds at the Farm Show in 1934. He liked the beauty and style of the Ayrshires and the association provided more information and assistance in locating cows, Brubaker noted.

Ayrshire milk with its cream advantage also provided Brubaker with some outstanding selling points. "Look at our creamline," he would tell potential customers.

This milk was also scientifically proven to be a soft curd milk with small fat globules. "It was the best milk for babies, invalids and anyone with digestive problems," Brubaker said.

"We never had any outstanding production records but we always kept the housewife supplied," he proudly reflected. "In fact, many of my customers preferred Ayrshire milk and could detect differences when other milk was served," he added. "Sometimes when away from home, the children would tell their mothers, 'This milk isn't as good as at home,' " Brubaker remembers with a smile.

Brubaker's family has been in the dairy business since 1873. His father pioneered the retail milk business for Brubaker when glass milk bottles became common in 1905. In 1922 however, he sold out. Brubaker's re-entry into the dairy business lasted until 1979 when he too dispersed his herd.

"No young folks were interested in continuing and my wife and I decided to slow down somewhat," Brubaker said.

However, instead of slowing down he merely shifted gears and became more active in church and community affairs. He has been a 4-H leader for 32 years and is active on the dairy promotion committee.

"I believe in the 4-H clubs. Its one of the best things for developing farm youths," Brubaker noted. His son Jim went through the 4-H program and showed the grand champion 4-H Ayrshire in his first year.

His activities with the association have also escalated since his "retirement."

He was instrumental in establishing the Spring Calf and Heifer Sale and the Ayrshire calf award program, which annually awards a calf to an outstanding FFA youth.

The Pennsylvania young sire committe has also benefitted from his input. This is one program that he is particularly pleased with.

"This is one thing that will help the breed and prove more bulls. This program has gained cooperation from all breeders across Pennsylvania and will help get proofs in record time," Brubaker said.

The committee is sending their seventh young sire into sampling and has received a plus proof on the first sire produced in this program Brubaker explained.

He has also managed consignment sales on the state and private levels. He served as Sales Manager for the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Association, the SE Ayrshire Club and the Central Ayrshire Club until his resignation from this post in 1983.

An enthusiastic breeder for many years and a lifelong supporter of the Ayrshire cow, Brubaker use every opportunity to promote his favorite bovine species.

He is optimistic about the Ayrshire's future as he sees an increased interest in the breed from new sources. Brubaker credits this interest to the cow's efficiency in converting feed to milk. Also top animals can purchased at reasonable prices.

Brubakers promotional efforts can be seen on his farm which he presently rents to Stanley Miller and his mixed herd of Guernseys and Ayrshires. Miller is in the process of acquiring Ayrshires as fast as possible.

The most recent activity which has dominated Brubakers time has been the planning of the National Convention which will take place next week, April 22 to 25.

"Everybody in Pennsylvania is cooperating and every committee is working on schedule," Brubaker reported.

At week's end registrations from more than 400 breeders and agribusiness people had come in from across the country and Canada, well exceeding the anticipated turnout.

As Brubaker noted, "Everybody wants to come and see what we have in Pennsylvania."

Berks County ASCS holds awards banquet

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

BETHEL – Berks County conservationists met recently to praise and award outstanding efforts in the conservation and preservation of nature's resources by fellow Berks Countians.

Jack B. Gounder, a WEEU radio personality, and a district director served as the master of ceremonies and Dr. James Grace, Extension Coordinator, School of Forest Resources at Penn State University, highlighted the evening with his presentation on "The Year of the Forest."

"Many people take for granted the natural resources that got us where we are today," Grace stated in his presentation. "We truly have a wonderful resource in our forests of Pennsylvania. With proper management, we can reap many more benefits," he went on to say.

According to statistics Grace presented, Pennsylvania now controls over four million acres of public owned forest lands. Another 13 million acres is privately owned. These figures rank Pennsylvania as the leading state in the number of forest land owners. Pennsylvania also has more hardwood timber than any other state.

This state also ranks as number one in the number of hunters and in the amount of money spent in the pursuit of fish and game. Stressing 1986 as the "Year of the Forest," Grace encouraged everyone to get involved in conservation efforts and educational efforts to preserve the nation's forest lands.

Each involved directly in conservation practices in their businesses or way of life, the 1986 award recipients provided excellent examples of conservation efforts on a local scale.

Receiving the applause and admiration of everyone present was the outstanding conservationist of the year. Harvey Adams, Sinking Spring, has been an active conservationist for most of his life. He has served in the conservationist Izaak Walton League of America for 53 years and has continuously held office since the Berks County chapter originated in 1932.

Adams has been a concerned conservationist all of his life and has testified before government representatives on issues including clean water and air, acid rain, soil erosion, strip mining, recycling, and the bottle bill.

Forrest C. Stricker, R1, Robesonia, was honored as the outstanding conservation farmer of the year. His 188 acres of his family dairy farm are contoured stripcropped and under a conservation tillage program. Cover crops are used on all corn silage acres. Grassed waterways are utilized, and rotation plans are followed. Active in the Conrad Weiser Young Farmers, the Berks County Holstein Club, and the Berks Farm-City Committee.

Other farmers recognized for their efforts and awarded a sign were: Walter M. Brubaker, Greenwich Township; Norman Moser, Colebrooke Township; Sam Schlouch, Brecknock Township; and Fred Wenz, Brecknock Township.

The outstanding conservation educator of 1986 went to Larry R. Kirk, a teacher in the Berks County Intermediate Unit.

Kirk assisted in beginning the outdoor education program at the Kutztown Area School District and has been involved with this type of program since its beginning. Appreciating the assistance the various conservation commissions can give to this type of outdoor and environmental educational programs, Kirk continues to help teach and support others in the development of these programs.

A special award highlighted this year's banquet went to Solon C. Phillips, Reading, as the outstanding conservation contractor. An equipment operator for the district since 1948, Phillips has constructed farm ponds, miles of diversion ditches, cropland terraces, and sod waterways. He has signed up many new cooperators over the years.

The ASCS county and community committee people with over ten years of service were also recognized at the banquet. They are: David Shirey, 35 years of service; Mark Balthaser, 15 years of service; George Delong, 10 years of service; and Richard Troutman, 10 years of service.

Mark Wolfskill, ASCS member, presents the award for outstanding conservation educator of the year to Larry Kirk, Reading.

Mark Wolfskill stands with Solon Phillips, outstanding conservation contractor, as he was presented the award. Roy Christman, ASCS member also presented the award.

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

Who will manage the supply?

The farm papers are starting to fill up with stories, editorials, and personal opinions about the establishment of Quota Systems for milk. The immediate reservation about milk quotas is, "who will set them up, and how will they be maintained and managed?"

While everyone agrees that there must be some control over milk production, everyone does not agree on how to do it. Quotas are cussed and discussed at every farm gathering, and the general opinion seems to be that the Government will establish and administer them.

The case for discipline and management within the industry seems to be muted and shy. Why?

It has always seemed to me that there are two choices that dairymen have in controlling their destiny. One is to let the politicians in Washington do it, the other is to do it themselves. Obviously, while the latter is more desirable, it is also the hardest to do.

The big problem is discipline and restraint within the body of producers. There are too many rugged individualists among farmers.

Farm Cooperatives are a well established fact in modern existance. We have learned to live and operate within a well proven set of guidelines governing the Cooperative spirit.

The most successful Co-ops are run by a small set of dedicated farmer-directors who are wise enough to hire competent managers. The farmers themselves set the policies that govern the Co-op, and see to it that the managers they hired carry them through. And all the members must operate by the rules that they imposed upon themselves.

One problem that would hinder self-discipline among milk producers is what to do about those who will not co-operate. Without Government intervention and the imposition of stiff penalties against non-cooperators, discipline within the industry might fall apart. If the fellow who will not cooperate within the quota imposed by his own neighbors, who is to discipline or impose a penalty on his actions?

There is still freedom of choice on whether to join any Co-op or operate in a free economy. And it probably should stay that way. The only problem is, that there is always the entrepreneur that wants to get ahead of everyone else, and will find ways to do it, even if it means forcing someone else out of business.

It can happen even within a quota system, if quotas are deemed to have a value, and the price is negotiable. Quotas will be traded and bought and sold like any other commodity.

Might it be possible for the Government to empower the establishment of Co-ops that could then govern the operation of quotas within the industry itself? The proper place of Government in the whole process would be to sharpen the teeth by strict laws on the purchase and pricing of surplus milk.

The quotas would be set and administered by farmers themselves, within co-operative laws, and if a producer chooses to sell milk outside the quotas set by the Co-op, he would be governed only by the economics of the situation. He wouldn't last long producing milk at a loss.

Perhaps it is Utopian dreaming, but isn't it time that the Dairy industry grows up, takes hold of it's own destiny, and stops begging Uncle Sam for help? If there must be supply control by quotas, let the dairy industry itself set them as well as the price of milk.

The Government can do it's thing by providing lawful support for the cooperative efforts of a vital industry. Economics will do the rest.

U of D Ag Day Set April 26

The University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences will holds its 11th annual ag day at Townsend Hall on the Newark campus April 26 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Ag day is coordinated by students and offers a wide variety of events designed to educate and entertain.

Ag day is open to everyone and most events are free. Visitors can stroll through the college's teaching gardens, tour the Agricultural Experiment Station farm on a hay wagon, learn about plant tissue culture or avian influenza which has devastated poultry, and even milk a cow.

Students of landscape design will answer questions and also design landscapes for visitors if provided with a picture of a home or facility. The Cooperative Extension Service's Master Gardeners will also be on hand to answer questions on lawn and garden problems.

Other highlights of this year's event are:

Pony rides, petting zoo featuring young farm animals, college career counseling, livestock shows featuring young dairy and beef cattle and lambs, sheep shearing demonstrations, poultry display featuring Delaware Blue Hens, soils display, baby chicks hatching, modern farm machinery display, beekeeping exhibit, clowns and balloons, plant sales, Alpha Zeta chicken barbecue, FFA hot dogs and soft drinks, home-baked bread sale.

Maryland Dairy Council celebrates 25th anniversary

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

BALTIMORE, MD — The national president of Dairy Council came to town this week, to help celebrate an anniversary.

Elwood W. Speckman, PhD., was the featured speaker at the 25th anniversary meeting of Dairy Council of the Upper Chesapeake Bay, held at the downtown Marriott Hotel.

"The problem is more with the diner than the dinner," observed the NCD head, commenting on changing consumer eating habits, based on real or perceived ideas of nutrition.

According to Dr. Speckman, a growing consumer consciousness of ties between eating and health, such as the continuing cholesterol debate, poses both a "threat and an opportunity for the dairy industry."

Dairy Council's mission through 1988, according to Dr. Speckman, is to focus on the changing diet needs of society, with a realistic approach to the development and implementation of new programs.

Issues of calcium, cholesterol and fitness all tie to renewed awareness of diet. A large segment of consumers have misconceptions of the nutrient values of dairy products, mistakenly perceiving them as high in fat and calories.

Dairy Council strives through education programs to promote balanced diets, based on the recommended four food groups. Part of that message is that recommended daily levels of dairy food consumption supplies 76 percent of calcium needs, 36 percent of phosphorous, 36 percent of riboflavin, 21 percent of protein, and 20 percent of zinc and vitamin B12, yet only ten percent of energy, or calorie, levels. "Nutrient dense" is how Dairy Council describes the diet value of dairy products.

Increased awareness of the need for adequate calcium in diets serves as a link between dairy products and fitness. High incidences of osteoporosis, tied to low calcium intake, have made calcium a timely national health issue.

Nutrition researchers are further delving into the relationship between calcium levels and blood pressure. High blood pressure, or hypertension, in turn is often linked to heart disease and strokes. Researchers are also studying the role of calcium and cultured dairy products in reducing colon cancer.

"Most men and women are not consuming proper levels of calcium," noted Dr. Speckman. "And, some specialists are now suggesting that the recommended minimum dairy requirement for calcium is too low."

Research continues to be a large part of National Dairy Council's industry role, with 98 different research studies underway. In addition to the range of studies on calcium, scientists are looking at such diverse concepts as the role of ice cream in the diets of diabetics, the role of whole milk in treating stomach ulcers, and a possible tie between the consumption of certain hard cheeses and reduced tooth cavities.

As part of the silver anniversary luncheon celebration, honorary director Ralph Strock presented a milk toast to the work of the Dairy Council. Special guests included past directors and former staff members.

Dairy Council of the Upper Chesapeake Bay, was incorporated in June of 1960. DCUCB is headquartered in Towson, and funded by members of the Middle Atlantic Division of Dairymen, Inc., and the Southeast United Dairy Industry Association.

On hand to help celebrate Dairy Council's 25th Anniversary were (left), Jesse Burall, president of the Dairy Council; Effie Robinson, vice president of the eastern region of the southeast district; Bob Earle, vice president of operations of SUDIA; Carolyn Thompson, manager of the Dairy Council; and speaker Dr. Elwood Speckman.

Dairy buy-out will add to 2nd-quarter beef supply

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Additional slaughter resulting from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's dairy whole-herd buy-out program will add only slightly to second-quarter beef supplies, according to a USDA official.

Ewen M. Wilson, deputy assistant secretary for economics, said analysis by USDA's Economic Research Service points to 250-275 million pounds, or three to four percent, more beef in the second quarter as a result of the dairy program. In the third quarter, beef supplies are expected to increase about three percent, or 160-190 million pounds, Wilson said.

From April 1 through Aug. 31, the first of three periods of the buy-out program, USDA will contract with 9,503 dairy farmers for slaughter of 633,176 cows, 216,970 heifers and 165,900 calves. Under program provisions, cows and bred heifers must be slaughtered within 15 days of the date of the sale of the animal, or exported within 45 days, but not later than Aug. 31. For the April-August period, unbred heifers and calves may be put on feed but must be slaughtered by Sept. 30 or exported within 45 days, but not later than Aug. 31.

Sharpest slaughter increases will occur for cow beef, Wilson said, primarily for April through August — the first of the three program periods. Dates for the other two program periods are Sept. 1-Feb. 28 and March 1-August 31, 1987.

However, Wilson stressed that about 30 percent of these cows would have been slaughtered anyway, given the normal culling rate of the dairy herd. Also, he said, heifers and calves going to market will be of lighter weight, thus adding less to overall supplies. Total cattle slaughter for the last three quarters in 1986 is expected to average at least 1-3 percent below last year's level, he said.

Wilson noted that provisions in the Food Security Act of 1985 to remove excess red meat supplies from the market can largely offset the impact of the increased slaughter. On March 28, USDA said it would buy 400 million pounds of red meat in addition to amounts normally purchased for the school lunch and other domestic feeding programs. USDA also is negotiating with the Defense Department on additional DOD use of red meat as specificed in the farm bill (included in the 400 million pounds).

Purchases of canned beef and ground beef will begin immediately and purchases of other red-meat items will be timed to coincide with slaughter under the termination program and to assist markets. Other purchases under consideration include ham, beef roasts, and other red meat items. Of the 400 million pounds, 200 million will be for domestic use, and the remaining 200 million pounds of red meat will be available for export.

Potential also exists, Wilson said, for export of some of the cattle as producing dairy animals and heifers, thus further reducing the burden on domestic meat supplies.

Also, the United States has a 10,000-ton (22-million-pound) quota for high quality beef into the European Community. This has never been filled and could provide a market for some additional meat.

this procedure, he says, is that subsoil lacks the nutrients and water-holding capacity necessary for plant growth. So by bringing it to the surface, the topsoil in effect becomes diluted. For best results, topsoil belongs on top, and subsoil belongs on the bottom, Myer asserts.

"When you're mixing topsoil with subsoil, neither one can do the job it's supposed to do," he says. And with his corn yields averaging 160 to 185 bushels during the past five years, it's hard to argue with Myer's logic.

Although they may not be ready to hang their hats on Myer's tillage system, most experts who have seen the results aren't ready to argue, either.

"I think he has something that's worth looking at," says Albert Jarrett, Penn State's associate professor of agricultural engineering. Jarrett, who along with other scientists visited Myer's farm in March, was hard-pressed to refute the farmer's claims. "It was our opinion that there had been no evidence of runoff from any of those fields," he says, adding, however, that he had no way of knowing how much rain had actually fallen on the farm during the winter.

Jarrett, who notes that the system is "not quite ridge tilling and not quite chisel plowing," has some theories about why slit tillage is apparently successful. "With slit tillage, we're actually taking the terracing concept and reducing the width of the terraces to about 30 inches," he says.

While these 30-inch "mini-terraces" help to contain the water, the sides of the slits are providing more surface area for infiltration. "What he is doing is enhancing the infiltration capacity of the soil, such that there is essentially no runoff–at least for storms of average magnitude," says Jarrett.

Just how much rainfall the slits can accommodate has yet to be determined, and studies getting underway this year may serve to answer that question. Jarrett notes that tests will be conducted on the Myer farm, as well as two nearby farms where moldboard and chisel plowing are practiced. Using these additional farms with similar soil types and terrain should provide a more valid comparison, he notes.

Jarrett cautions that the system's water holding capacity may not always be a plus. "You have to be very careful that the water that infiltrates doesn't take with it a high concentration of nitrogen," he says, noting that the slit tillage system will have to be accompanied by a conscientious nutrient management program to ensure groundwater quality.

The ag engineer was as impressed with Myer's soil texture the quality as he was with the tillage system itself. "I don't know that I've seen soil like that in a long, long time," he said. Growers who go to slit tillage could possibly note similar improvements in their topsoil after five to 10 years in the program, he estimated.

Trenton Mill Farms' Clarence and George Mielky are soybean growers — Asgrow brand soybean growers — and they have been for six or eight years. "We continue to plant Asgrow soybeans," says Clarence, "because of all around performance. We plant between 1,000 and 1,200 acres and all of it is Asgrow. The Asgrows have good emergence. They yield and harvest well, too. We've only had one Asgrow variety that cut hard, all the rest are easy to cut. Two years ago, we did some custom work and all the other beans we did cut harder than our Asgrows, didn't they George?"

"That's right," George observes, "and their 3127 is one of the best there is to harvest. You can plant 3127's early or late around here and they come through. They can be knee high and still do 50 bushels. They will surprise you."

Clarence and George are both agreed, "If we could plant only one variety, it would be Asgrow 3127."

Friends pool talent to create 'Country Lane' craft shop

BY BARBARA RADER
Staff Correspondent

MEREDIAN — When Shirley Roe found herself swamped with orders for her homemade dolls 10 years ago, she turned to her friend Nancy Sheiver for help. Today, these two talented women own "The Country Lane," a gift shop in Meredian that offers handcrafted country items.

It all started about 10 years ago when Shirley made a doll. First, a relative asked her to make one, then a friend wanted one and before she knew what was happening, Shirley had orders for nearly 20 dolls, all to be completed before Christmas.

Knowing how much her friend Nancy enjoyed sewing, Shirley turned to her for a helping hand in filling all the orders.

For the first few years, the pair made dolls exclusively, featuring their own creations of Raggedy Ann and Andy, Holly Hobbie and Strawberry Shortcake. Then, seeking a change of pace, they started making rooster and chicken doorstops in calico prints.

When they first started in business, Shirley and Nancy worked from Shirley's basement. But because the basement offered little heat and no windows, they moved the business into Nancy's home shortly after it was remodeled.

Their new room in Nancy's home was specially equipped with all the necessary sewing items and cupboards for storage.

When the items are completely finished, they are taken to Shirley's home. Their Meredian Gift Shop is the main distribution point for their wares, but they do attend a few craft shows during the year.

By making their own patterns, Nancy and Shirley are able to offer a unique product. Nearly all of their patterns are their own; however, some of their doll patterns are revised versions of commercial patterns, Shirley said.

Usually, they said, one pattern idea leads to another, and it seems they always have fresh ideas for still another country handicraft. Some ideas come from magazines and craft shows and are revised to suit their needs.

Since summertime usually leads them to other activities with friends and family members, Nancy and Shirley slow down on their production for a few months. But in the fall, they work steadily at their business five days a week.

To keep boredom at bay, the women divide their work day into two parts. In the morning they work a few hours on one item, then change to something completely different in the afternoon. They are also careful not to make their patterns too detailed or tedious, so one particular project doesn't drag on.

But their biggest problem, they say, is keeping up with all the orders they have. It seems they just can't produce their country crafts quickly enough.

Nancy and Shirley spend most of January making patterns for the crafts they will produce during the course of the year. Each year they add a new craft or two to the regular items they sell year after year. Some items are suitable for use year round, while others can be modified to suit the season by changing the fabric colors and prints.

The women are cautious not to waste any materials, using leftovers from one project in another. Each product of Country Lane has its own box. The boxes contain a finished sample of the item, pattern, and any extra pieces or special supplies needed to make it. This way, if a special order is needed or they want to resume making the item, Nancy and Shirley can quickly and easily find their materials.

They have devised other ways to streamline their craft production. Unique storage containers, like gallon-size bleach containers cut out to store laces, make the job a little easier. Using the spout as the exit, the lace doesn't get tangled and is much easier to work with, they explained. Old fruit boxes are used to store patterns.

Nancy and Shirley say they always keep their eyes open for materials that would work well for holidays and special occasions. They purchase the majority of their supplies in large quantities and at wholesale or bulk prices.

Both women have their own sewing machines and they recently purchased a commercial sewing machine to handle heavy and bulky items.

All Country Lane items come with a personalized label or a business card, making it easy for the customer to find the source of the product.

Normally, Nancy does a lot of the hand sewing and Shirley spends most of her time at the sewing machine, but exceptions do occur at times. Regardless of who is tackling which chore though, the two women make all the items together from start to finish.

They even work together when they want to make something to give as a gift.

They offer potholders, placemats, napkins and aprons, most of which are made in coordinated colors, doorstops, quart baskets in many colors, wall hangings of all types and special seasonal decorations. They also make dolls and stuffed animals.

Customers seeking a holiday decoration, special gift or just something to spruce up the home, will find items carefully crafted by Shirley Roe and Nancy Sheiver to fit the bill.

Shirley Roe, left, and Nancy Sheiver, right, pull materials from cupboards to start still another project. The table beside them holds a number of completed projects.

Nancy Sheiver checks the box of potholder patterns to make sure all the necessary materials are properly stored.

Homestead Notes

Shirley irons the covers to start the batting for baskets, a popular item at the Country Lane.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Ah, Spring. That glorious time of year when birds sing their hearts out, a young man's fancy turns to love, and you can tell someone to go fly a kite and not get in hot water over it.

Spring. When daffodils bloom, tadpoles come to life, and farmers plow furrows in fields and into their wives' foreheads as they try to figure out when the men might show up for a meal.

Spring. When any woman worthy of the title is supposed to swoon over thoughts of tearing into every room of the house, ripping it apart, moving it around, hanging it out, dusting it off, and maybe even painting it up.

Forget it! While this farm wife does do windows (at least once a year whether they need it or not), she doesn't Spring Houseclean. Does anyone Spring Houseclean anymore?

One part of Spring Housecleaning I do miss – it's a perfect excuse to change the location of furniture around in a room. But, remodeling over the years has made the small-to-begin-with rooms of our farmhouse awash in doorways, windows, and electrical outlets, placed at all sorts of inconvenient spots. And there is only one way in which the present furniture can be fit – I know, because I've tried other ways.

Still, breathes there a woman anywhere who doesn't occasionally have a yen to move things around, give the place a fresh look, update and improve on the home environment? Being locked into a pattern with built-in cupboards and fits-just-so furniture, leaves only one outlet around here for creative "environmental restructuring."

Outside. Which suits the gardener in me just super. Can't move furniture? Move plants.

For years, I've coveted a spot for growing roses. One spot in the border is too wet and stands in puddles during the spring rains. Another part is good for little more than cactus culture. And where I've been trying to grow a few of the thorny bushes, the cows occasionally sneak out of the barn and dance the tango over them.

Finally, I think I've located a suitable place for roses. If the pigs can be kept out of it when they venture out on their impromptu forays.

Of course, moving the roses leaves a bare spot. A sort of spot to "move the furniture." So to speak.

Now the iris spend half their lives gasping for air for their roots, due to springs which turned up after the hurricanes of the '70s, and invasive grass pursuing a "right to life" policy. Where it was too shallow for roses, will the iris find happiness?

And do heifers relish iris with the same lust they have for gobbling daylily tops? If daylilies were toxic, the marauding band of nibblers that spent one recent night investigating the backyard would be but a memory.

Can a forsythia be coaxed to glow yellow and hide an ugly corner between the fuel tank and old block wall? Will zebra grass survive in the shady desert of agressive maple tops and roots? If I dig it up and move it, then what's best to move into that vacant corner?

Where can I go with two dozen rooted pussywillow branches just pleading for the chance to become a permanent part of the landscape? Or the raspberries that will have to relocate to make room for a sod waterway? And will the electric co-op de-energize us if I borrow a small portion of their pole for a clematis?

Spring Housecleaning? In the house?

Who needs it?

Centre County 4-H Sheep Club

Members of the Centre County 4-H Sheep Club met April 2 at the county Extension office.

Martha Hartle, chairman of cookie sales, reported that cookie orders are due April 19th and that the cookies will cost $1.75 this year.

The group also discussed weigh-ins for the market lamb project. Lambs will be weighed May 31 from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the Paul Hartle Farm. Lambs may not weigh over 80 pounds at the initial weighing and must weigh at least 85 pounds to be sold at the Grange Fair.

The group elected the following officers for the coming year: Craig Fleck, president; Martha Hartle, vice president; Cinnamon Rudy, secretary; Gary Rossman, treasurer; Kory Rudy, historian; Joyce Harpster, news reporter; and Amy Clair and Kevin Barger, game leaders.

During the election Craig Fleck and Joyce Harpster conducted a game on the breeds of sheep.

The next meeting will be held May 7 at 8 p.m. at the Centre County Extension office; the program will be a speaker on feeding market lambs.

Anyone interested in joining the club should contact Paul Hartle at 355-3149 or Shirley and Harold Harpster at 466-6669.

Plan Your Vacation Now

For many families this is the time of the year to plan the family vacation. Have you ever wondered what makes your vacation successful? For one thing, careful planning, and for another, the family itself.

Here are some tips to help make your holidays happy, whether the budget's large or limited:

- Decide exactly what your vacation needs and preferences are, then try to tailor your plans to fit.
- What interests your family? Swimming, camping, golf, visiting historic sites? Do they like to dress for dinner or to be completely casual? The answers help in selecting resorts, hotels or campgrounds.
- Think of the children. For younger travelers, look into special provisions — rates, supervised play areas, swimming pools and particular attractions for them.
- Be realistic, especially about money. Economics play a big part in the selection of a vacation spot. Better a less ambitious schedule than a budget stretched out of shape and vacation full of stress.
- Consider traveling off season. Inquire about trips to areas of the country you'd like to visit at a time that isn't the height of their vacation season. There are attractive off-season package rates almost everywhere.
- Tipping can cause anxiety. Allow for it in advance, along with other expenses. Then relax.
- Check your attitude. Go expecting to have a good time and leave worries and doubts at home. Smile; you'll most likely receive a smile in return.
- Do what pleases you — it's your vacation.

Put Away Your Winter Wools

Ready or not, warm weather's here and now's the time to put away your winter woolens. Before you do, be sure they are clean. Stains and spots allowed to set in the fabric will always be more difficult to remove later.

Have your jackets, coats and tailored or lined woolens dry cleaned. Ask your dry cleaner about chemical treatments to protect against moth damage; most cleaners provide this service — treatment may save your favorite suit if you have it done now.

For washable woolens follow these techniques:

- Use cool or lukewarm water.
- Use recommended amounts of non-alkaline soap or detergents.
- Allow to soak 3 to 4 minutes and gently squeeze — don't rub.
- Rinse at least twice with fresh water.
- Roll in a bath towel to absorb excess water.
- Dry woolens on a flat surface, away from direct heat.
- Gently shape a woolen knit, to its original size.

When you're ready to store out of season woolens, be sure your wool garments are well protected against moths. Have them treated by a dry cleaner, or use one of the preventive products available in many supermarkets and hardware stores — moth balls, crystals, sprays, or pockets. Store them in a cedar closet or chest or in garment bags. Never use plastic cleaning bags — woolens need some air circulation.

Lamb isn't just for special occasions anymore

Homemakers often think lamb is appropriate only for special occasion meals. But lamb is much more versatile than that and is a good buy, with very little fat covering and only a minimal amount of marbling.

Lamb is tender by nature and cooking at very low temperatures, down to 275°F. when time allows, makes it one of the best cuts you can purchase for good eating and diversity.

A 3-ounce serving of fresh lamb will provide approximately 40 percent of an adult's Recommended Daily Allowance for protein, only 7 percent of the average daily caloric intake, essential B vitamins, iron and zinc.

Below are a few of our readers' suggestions for preparing this delicious meat. And while you're enjoying this week's recipes, please check out the Recipe Topics below. If you have a favorite salad, cookie or brownie recipe to share, please send it along to us!

LAMB CHOPS IN A POUCH

Fry chops in a lightly oiled heavy skillet until browned on both sides but not cooked through. Place two chops on a square of foil (about 12 inches). This serves three, so you'll need three pieces of foil. Drain fat from the pan and add butter, onion and garlic. Saute until onion is soft. Spoon onion and garlic evenly over the three packages of chops, leaving butter in the pan. Now place three slices of potato over each package of chops and brush with butter in pan. Top with slices of tomato, sprinkle lightly with oregano and lay a slice of cheese on top. Fold foil using double folds to seal each package. Place close together in a baking dish, cheese side up, and bake at 325°F. for 1½ hours. Serves 3.

For a few short weeks each spring, fresh asparagus can be found in abundance. Those tasty, tender shoots remind us that spring is indeed here and that other homegrown, fresh vegetables are on the way.

Golden Asparagus Supreme

½ cup cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
1½ pounds fresh asparagus, cut into 1-inch pieces
1/3 cup butter or margarine
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
6 ounces process pimento cheese, cut in pieces
4 ounces cream cheese, cut in pieces

Combine cracker crumbs and the 2 tablespoons butter; set aside. Cook fresh asparagus in boiling water 4 minutes or until crisp-tender; drain. Arrange asparagus in buttered 1-quart baking dish; set aside. Melt the 1/3 cup butter in saucepan. Stir in flour and salt. Add milk and cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and starts to boil. Add cheeses and continue cooking and stirring until cheese is melted; remove from heat. Pour sauce over asparagus and sprinkle evenly with prepared crumbs. Bake in 350°F. oven about 30 minutes or until sauce is bubbly and hot and crumbs are browned. Makes 6 servings.

ANSWER - Connie Brugger, Selinsgrove, asked for a plain yogurt recipe. Thanks go to a reader from Middletown for the following Homemade Yogurt recipe.

Homemade Yogurt

This recipe takes 3 to 6 hours to make so start early in the day. In a 2-quart pan over medium heat, warm 3 cups water to 130° F. to 140° F. Remove from heat and beat in 2 cups nonfat dry milk powder. Let mixture cool to 120° F.—about 10 minutes. Then, with a wire whisk, add ½ cup plain yogurt to milk, mixing thoroughly. Use a natural yogurt without additives. Pour mixture into 4 1- to 2- cup glass containers. Cover tightly with lids or plastic wrap. Incubate for 3 to 6 hours until yogurt reaches desired consistency. Tip container slightly to check consistency. Do NOT stir.

To incubate, the temperature must be held between 85° F. and 110° F. Too low and the yogurt won't develop properly; too high and you will destroy the yogurt culture. In a gas oven with a pilot light, keep the oven door shut so the temperature holds between 85 and 110° F. In a gas oven without a constant pilot light or an electric oven, place a 13x9-inch baking pan on the lowest rack in the oven. Fill with 2 cups boiling water. Place yogurt on rack above on a baking pan. Keep oven door closed. Replace boiling water every hour. Keep checking your temperature.

On a nice hot summer day I put my yogurt on my closed-in porch and let nature do the incubation. Be careful to keep it out of drafts.

Be sure to use natural yogurt without additives. Check ingredients. To get the best yogurt, when you buy the yogurt starter be sure to check the date on the container. Buy the freshest. Also use fresh dry milk powder. Be sure not to stir while it's incubating and control the temperature. After you make this the first time, you can use your own homemade yogurt to start the next batch. Just be sure it's fresh.

ANSWER - Mrs. Harvey Shoemaker, Mt. Joy, requested a recipe for cheese popcorn. Thanks go to Mrs. Glenn Wenger, Richfield, for the following recipe.

Popcorn Cheese Snacks

2 quarts popped corn	½ cup butter
½ cup grated cheese	½ teaspoon salt

Spread freshly popped corn in a flat pan; keep hot and crisp in oven. Melt butter and grated cheese and add salt. Pour mixture over corn. Stir until every kernel is cheese flavored.

ANSWER - Mary Z. Reiff, East Earl, requested a recipe for whole wheat bread that also requires oatmeal. Thanks go to Lianne Glemboski, Nicholson, for the recipe below, and to all others who shared similar recipes.

Honey Oatmeal Bread

2½ cups boiling water	2 cups quick cooking oatmeal
1 cup honey	¾ cup cooking oil
2 cups or more whole wheat flour	4 beaen eggs
2 packages dry yeast	2 tablespoons salt

Dissolve yeast in 1 cup warm water. Pour boiling water over oatmeal and set aside to cool until lukewarm. Mix all ingredients and beat well, then add yeast, being sure everything is just warm before adding. Work in enough white flour (preferably unbleached) to make a nice spongy dough that is not sticky. Grease top and let rise; knead and let rise again.

Bake at 375 to 400° F. for 10 minutes. Lower heat to 350° F. for 25 to 30 minutes, depending on the size of the loaves. A delicious, nourishing bread.

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

Let The Kids Cook Dinner!

Teaching your children to cook is really terrific for them. Not only does it give them something to do when they can't find anything to do, it helps develop confidence and independence too. It teaches them to follow directions, to complete tasks, and maybe, to clean up after themselves!

Boys like to cook as much as girls (if they're given a chance!) and need to learn. A newly-divorced man I met recently points out why: he'd never cooked anything in his life, and at 30, he suddenly has to learn.

So cut out these two recipes, hand them to your children and tell them it's their turn to cook dinner next weekend. If you want to go all the way, have them make out a grocery list and let them do the shopping too!

Both recipes are easy to make, and are kid tested for taste and technique. Younger children may need help chopping the onion (use frozen chopped if necessary).

Once they've tried each recipe "as is" teach them to be creative cooks by substituting other ingredients. One day "make do" with what you have on hand in your cupboard. Another day, plan changes and purchase ingredients if necessary.

Use a can of tuna or spam in the casserole instead of the hot dogs; try different vegetables or a different type of cheese. In the Crunchy Champs, add some miniature marshmallows, or try using butterscotch chips or different cereal.

Serve this casserole with fruit and Crunchy Champ cookies for dessert. You'll have a well balanced meal that's easy to fix. Make the cookies ahead of time, so they can chill and be cut for dinner.

Hot Dog Casserole

(Total cooking time: 15 minutes)
2 large potatoes
1 small onion
1 10-ounce package frozen mixed vegetables (2 cups)
1 10-ounce can cream of celery soup
½ cup milk
1 4-ounce package shredded cheddar cheese (1 cup), divided
½ pound hot dogs (5 to 6)

Utensils Needed:

2-quart microwave safe casserole with a lid
Sharp knife and cutting board
Vegetable peeler
Measuring cup
Small bowl
Large spoon

1. Peel potatoes and cut into ½-inch cubes. Peel and chop onion; you should have about ¼ cup onion. Put potatoes and onion in casserole. Open package of vegetables and dump in casserole too. Stir to mix things up. Put the cover on.

2. Microwave on high power for four minutes: stir. Put cover back on and microwave on high for four minutes longer, until the vegetables are almost tender.

3. While vegetables are cooking, cut the hot dogs into ½-inch slices. Then make the sauce: In the small bowl, mix up the soup, milk, and ⅔ cup of the cheese. (Save the other ⅓ cup cheese to sprinkle on top later.)

4. After vegetables are cooked, stir in the hot dogs and the sauce, mixing well. Put the cover on.

5. Microwave on high for three minutes. Stir, then recover. Microwave for three minutes longer, until everything is very hot. Stir again.

6. Sprinkle the ⅓ cup cheese on top. Leave the cover off and microwave on high for about one minute, until the cheese melts. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Crunchy Champs

1 12-ounce package chocolate chips
1 cup smooth peanut butter
1 cup quick cooking oats
2 cups flake wheat cereal, slightly crushed
1 cup coconut
1 cup raisins OR 1 cup chopped nuts

Utensils needed:

Large glass or plastic bowl
11 x 7-inch or 12 x 8-inch baking pan
Waxed paper
Big spoon
Measuring cup
Large sharp knife and bread board

1. Tear off about 14 inches of waxed paper, and lay it in the baking pan. Let the extra waxed paper hang out over the two long sides of the pan.

2. Put the chips and the peanut butter in the big bowl. Microwave on medium power (50,5) for four minutes.

3. Stir with the spoon for about one minute. If the chips aren't all melted, microwave on medium power (50,5) for one or two minutes longer. Stir again until chips are all melted.

4. Stir in oats and wheat cereal, mixing well. Then stir in coconut and raisins or nuts.

5. When it's all mixed up, dump it in the pan on top of the waxed paper. Use the back of the spoon to spread the mixture in the pan. To flatten out the cookies evenly, fold the extra waxed paper over the top of the dough, and press the cookies flat with your hands. Put in the refrigerator for about an hour to chill.

6. When the chocolate is set, pull the waxed paper up off the top of the cookies and use it to pull the cookies out of the pan. Peel off all the paper then cut into squares or bars. Store at room temperature or in the refrigerator.

Tip: These cookies make good trail bars for quick energy on hikes. Wrap each bar separately so they don't glue your pockets together!

Vultures find inviting home at Gettysburg National Military Park

GETTYSBURG — The world will little note nor long remember what many visitors to Gettysburg National Military Park say when they see rows of big black birds sitting on a fence. What many of them are saying boils down to this:

"What are those big black birds, anyway?"

Folks, those aren't crows, or blackbirds, or anything else you'd like to visit the feeder in your back yard. They're vultures, and there are lots and lots of them.

Local legend holds that vultures first showed up at Gettysburg after the awful carnage that took place here in July 1863. The 10,000 to 12,000 Union and Confederate soldiers who died in the battle were quickly buried. But carcasses of many of the slain animals — historians estimate that between 10,000 and 15,000 horses were killed — were not removed, providing a rip-roaring feast for the birds known as "nature's garbage men." Thus, says local lore, the vultures arrived and have stayed ever since.

'Unique Natural Resource'

Scientists have come around lately to study the situation, and they have concluded that local legend is wrong. But along the way, they have learned much about the birds that the National Park Service's Hal Greenlee calls "a unique natural resource."

Greenlee is the park's first natural-resource manager. When he arrived eight years ago, he saw birds - two species, black and turkey vultures, hang out here - and began hearing the legends. He determined to get to the bottom of the situation, and inspired scientists at Pennsylvania State University and Virginia Polytechnic Institute to undertake research projects.

First to arrive was Anthony Wright, a graduate student at Penn State, who busied himself primarily with finding out just how many vultures there were at Gettysburg, and where they were.

Wright discovered that the vulture's major roost was on Big Round Top, near the south end of the park. The vultures, he learned, bedded down for the night in white pines on the northwest-facing slope, even though white pines make up only 6 percent of the trees on the hill. Nearby conifers provided the birds with shelter from high winds, Wright found, and the widespread pine branches enabled the vultures, which have wingspans of up to six feet, to get in and out easily.

The heaviest concentration of birds is found in the winter, when as many as 800 spend the night in Big Round Top's pines, Wright learned. This makes Gettysburg one of the largest vulture-roosting areas in the East. Most disperse as the weather begins to warm up; but even in the summer months, about 200 make their home here.

Shortly before sunrise, the birds begin to leave their roosts and head for one of two "staging areas" nearby, where they sun themselves and wait for the breezes and air currents that they will ride in search of food. Virginia Tech's James Fraser explains that vultures are not power fliers, but soarers that depend on the wind.

Early-Morning Stretch

Early one late-winter morning, Greenlee and a visitor drove out to the staging areas, near Houcks Ridge and on the park's living-history farm. Although the number of birds had declined from its midwinter peak, between two and three dozen vultures could be seen at each site, in trees, on fences, or on the ground, occasionally spreading their wings as if to have the sun dry out the morning dampness.

A turkey vulture preens in a tree, perhaps preparing for the day's search for food. Turkey vultures have long predominated in the sizable vulture population in Gettysburg National Military Park, though black vultures, gradually extending their range in the eastern United States, now make up about a third of Gettysburg's flock. "Nature's garbage men," vultures feed on the carrion of both domestic and wild animals nearby.

As a visitor walked across a field toward them, a vulture would periodically soar into the air and circle around his head. Ungainly and unappealing on the ground, vultures in the air are beautiful, graceful fliers.

The researchers have come to like the birds enough to feel comfortable around them. Despite their reputation and appearance, vultures are not aggressive toward humans, and "the more I watched them, the more I decided they were pretty smart," says John Coleman, a Virginia Tech graduate student.

Coleman and Fraser captured 191 birds with a net, affixed identification tags to their wings, and fitted 21 of them with solar-powered radio transmitters.

What they learned surprised them, Coleman says: The birds are usually homebodies. Their daily foraging flights rarely took them more than nine miles from their roosts, and 90 percent stayed within six miles.

The vultures next in the spring, laying their eggs in cavelike crevices amid the boulders in a field near the Big Round Top roost. There is nothing elaborate about the nests; the female just crawls in and lays two eggs on top of whatever is already there.

Black vultures nest earlier in the year than turkey vultures, perhaps one reason their numbers have been growing to the point that they now make up a third of Gettysburg's vulture population – and they've only been around since about the mid-1950s.

Bountiful Food Supply

In talking about vultures, however, the question of food always recurs. The area surrounding the roost contains large numbers of livestock: in 1983, Adams County, in which Gettysburg is located, included 34,500 cattle, 10,100 dairy cows, 2,400 sheep, and 24,000 hogs. There also is a substantial number of white-tail deer; 1,242 were legally shot and 347 were killed on the highway in 1983.

The large quantities of livestock, deer, and other wild animals provide an enormous food supply for the vultures. Coleman and Fraser found that the two species varied in their food-hunting strategy.

Black vultures prefer large carcasses, often of domestic livestock, and return to them day after day until they are picked clean. Turkey vultures prefer small wild-animal remains and treat each day as a new adventure, rarely returning to the same source.

The combination of ample food sources, a perfect roosting area, and ideal nesting conditions makes Gettysburg National Military Park a virtual vulture paradise. And, say Coleman and Fraser, this, and not the 1863 battle, is what brought the birds here in the first place.

"I feel confident that turkey vultures have been around since people have farmed the area," says Coleman. "Some may have come that year just because of the battle, but birds don't hang around just to be there; the food and resources have to be there. They were there after the battle, and they probably were there before it, too."

So much for local legend.

Boyertown Historical Society plans annual Quilt Show

BOYERTOWN - The Boyertown Area Historical Society will host its 12th annual quilt show May 3 and 4 at the Society building in Boyertown.

The display, which contains over 100 quilts, has attracted visitors from surrounding states in other years. The exhibit includes 19th and 20th century quilts, most of which were made in southeastern Pennsylvania.

The antique textiles reveal the talent and love of color possessed by women of past generations, while the contemporary quilts and wall hangings reflect the abilities and artistry of today's fabric artists.

A "Chain Melody" pattern quilt made by show chairman Rosie Mutter and Society members will be part of the exhibit. Katie Reifsnyder quilted the piece.

Another highlight of the show will be an exhibit of "pieced picture" quilts and wall hangings. "Pieced picture" refers to any patchwork design that represents a visually tangible object, such as a schoolhouse, sailboat, North Carolina lily or pine tree. This type of patchwork, popular years ago, is still quite popular today. The show will also include a teddy bear exhibit.

In conjunction with this year's event, Nancy Roan, co-chairman of the 1984 Goschenhoppen Historians' Quilt Show and co-author of "Just a Quilt," will lecture on regional Pennsylvania German quilts and quilting traditions on Saturday, May 3 at 10 a.m. at the Good Shepherd United Church of Christ in Boyertown. Using slides and textiles to illustrate her presentation, Mrs Roan will examine past quilting practices that were prevalent in lower Berks and Montgomery Counties.

A workshop on the strip piecing method of quilt construction will be held May 3 at 1:30 p.m. at the Good Shepherd Church. Participants must bring a large roll of scotch tape, scissors to cut paper, ruler and pencil. Workshop cost is $6. Reservations should be made by sending a check, payable to the Boyertown Area Historical Society, along with a SASE, to Mrs. Edwin Reed, Box 703, RD 5, Boyertown, PA 19512.

Show hours will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. May 3, and from noon to 6 p.m. May 4. The Society building is located at 43 S. Chestnut St., Boyertown. Admission is $2 for adults and free for children under 16 accompanied by an adult.

Quilt Show speaker Nancy Roan and her son, Matthew, display a variation of Peakiomien Valley quilt for an "audience" of teddy bears.

National 4-H Conference

Reyburn has served as project leader for rocketry and wildlife. He has attended officer's training, regional demonstration contest, teen leader retreat and fashion revue. He has also participated in State Achievment Days, Leadership Forum and Ag Progress Days presentations. He was a delegate to National 4-H Club Congress in 1984.

Reyburn is a senior at State College Area High School and plans to attend Penn State in the fall.

• Barbara Shaffer of Hooversville has been a 4-H leader in Somerset County for 11 years. She has helped with many county events, including county fairs, exchange trips, cookbook and cookie sales and the junior livestock sale. She also served on Somerset County's Executive Committee.

She has participated in statewide events such as Leaders Conference, Farm Show and Collegiate 4-H Day held at Penn State University.

• Joann Logan of Greensburg has been a 4-H agent in Westmoreland County for 10 years. As a 4-H agent, she is responsible for coordinating 4-H youth programs and 4-H adult volunteer leaders.

• David Antram of Somerset is the 18-year-old son of Robert and Roberta Antram. He has been a 4-H member in Somerset County for 10 years and has completed projects in automotive, sheep, strawberries and petroleum power. A member of Steaks and Chops 4-H Club, Antram has held the offices of vice president, news reporter and club photographer.

Antram is the co-chairman of the KISS committee, the county's award-winning safety program. He participated in Leadership School, Capital Days and the 1984-85 interstate exchange to Iowa. He attended national 4-H Club Congress as a delegate in 1984.

Antram is a senior at Somerset Area High School and plans to study history at Penn State University.

Somerset youth wins 4-H Commodity Marketing trip

UNIVERSITY PARK — A Somerset youth who runs his own antique auto restoration business and raises sheep for profit has won a trip to the 25th annual 4-H Commodity Marketing Symposium at the Palmer House in Chicago.

David C. Antram, son of Robert and Roberta Antram of Somerset, is among 40 youths who were selected by the Cooperative Extension Service to attend the event, to be held April 19 through 23. The event is sponsored by the Chicago Board of Trade.

Antram was selected for his outstanding 4-H commodity marketing project. He raised and marketed 20 lambs during his 10 years with 4-H for a total profit of $1,039, and he presently owns 40 breeding sheep worth $4,175. The 4-H'er gained skills in purchasing and registering purebreds through the Pennsylvania State University performance sheep sales.

Along with his livestock holdings, Antram also restores antique sedans. Two of his successes were a $2,000 Kaiser sedan worth $4,500 after restoration, and a 1953 Kaiser Traveler finished in 1983. For his efforts, Antram won a scholarship and a trip to the 1984 National 4-H Congress as an automotive program national winner.

At the symposium, Antram will learn how the basic principles of marketing, distribution and utilization apply to commodities sold in cash markets and traded in futures markets of major exchanges.

He'll participate in seminars, tours and activities involving the use of futures markets as a management tool, and he'll learn how to apply his market knowledge to ongoing 4-H projects.

The symposium includes a visit to the Chicago Board of Trade floor, where participants will meet trade board officials, traders and marketing representatives. The visit will end with a simulated pit trading exercise.

MAKE SHORT WORK OF YOUR SPRING SPREADING CHORES WITH NEW HOLLAND EQUIPMENT

When you have mountains of manure to move, you can rely on New Holland spreaders and skid-steer loaders. Their productivity, dependability and versatility make them a smart investment.

SUPER BOOM LOADERS

They're the skid-steer loaders with more forward dump reach than conventional loaders. You get reach that lets you fill the biggest spreaders from one side, plus a sure-footed stance with a longer wheelbase and a lower center of gravity than other loaders.

MORE THAN A MANURE HANDLER

No matter which "Super Boom" loader you choose, you'll find it does hundreds of jobs around the farm. It's so versatile, you'll use it every day for loading, lifting, digging, feeding, cleaning. There's no end to the chores it can do.

VERSATILE SPREADERS

All Sperry New Holland box spreaders are well known for fast, efficient spreading of solid manure. Now, with special slurry side extensions, they can handle sloppy, runny manure. The "fishbowl" shaped side extensions splash liquid back toward the center of the spreader. Our New Slurry Tank Spreader and our Flail Tanker also provide the same versatility. If you've got a lot of real soupy manure to handle these would probably suit you best. But these machines will also handle solids as well. Ask your New Holland Dealer for a demonstration today.

BONDED PROTECTION

New Holland offers you "Bonded Protection" on all box spreaders. That means you get free sides if those on your New Holland box spreader rust through while the rest of the spreader still works. Even if you buy the spreader used.

BEST VALUE PACKAGE

No one builds equipment better than New Holland. And no one backs up the sale as well either. Quality parts and service, excellent trade-in value, bonded Protection, a one-year/500-hour warranty on loaders, and a two-year warranty on spreaders. That's all part of the best value package you can buy.

Before you buy, see the dealer with the best total deal. He sells New Holland.

Take time out for your preschooler, family living specialist advises

BY SUZANNE KEENE

LEBANON — A mother sits on the kitchen floor facing her two-year-old daughter. Toys clutter the floor, the dirty dishes wait in the sink and a list of calls to make waits by the phone.

At first glance it would seem that very little is happening here. But a closer look will reveal that something very important to successful parenting and a happy family is occurring. The mother and child are communicating.

"Research has shown that strong families spend time together," Extension family living specialist James Van Horn told a group of parents in Lebanon this week. And, he continued, "The time that a child spends with a parent is most valuable.

"Regardless of what we do or how busy we are, we need to reserve time if we have young children," he stressed. No one, he added, is too busy to spend just five uninterrupted, undistracted minutes with their child.

Spend those five minutes — or more — doing whatever your child wants to do. "It may be just sitting on the floor and watching him make faces," Van Horn said.

Once you have made these five-minute sessions a part of your regular schedule, work at expanding them.

If you don't spend the time with your child, other good things, like communicating, aren't going to happen, he said. By offering your child your undivided attention, you are providing an opportunity for communication and letting him know he is an important person.

But communicating with a child is more than simply spending time with him. When talking with your child, Van Horn said, get yourself into a position where he can look you in the eye.

"Eye contact says an awful lot about what the person you are talking to is thinking," Van Horn said. Remember how you felt last time you talked to someone several inches — or feet — taller than you? Chances are you felt a little uncomfortable or intimidated.

"Get down to the child's level or get him up to your level," Van Horn noted. "If you have a preschooler, your knees ought to be sore."

When talking to a child, it's just as important not to interrupt as when you're listening to an adult. "We interrupt kids a lot. We're impatient," he said. But parents must remember that kids aren't just miniature adults. "Their minds do not work like ours."

Preschoolers have a lot to learn and so they ask a lot of questions. As parents, "we ought to be willing to answer those questions," Van Horn said.

Some parents resort to yelling when their kids don't behave the way the parent thinks they should. "Yelling is a very good outlet," Van Horn says. But, to be a truly effective communicator, speak softly. "Try turning your volume down to kids and you will find generally their attention goes up," Van Horn advised. "Use a soft voice, a pastel voice."

While tone of voice and volume should be considered, what is said is equally important. "We (parents) need to say what we mean, and mean what we say," Van Horn noted. When communicating with preschool children, keep it simple, and tell them what you want them to do, don't ask them.

It is kind of silly, Van Horn said, to ask a child "Do you want to wash your hands?" Of course he doesn't. Say what you mean: "Johnny, go wash your hands for dinner."

Following through with the command is just as important as phrasing it correctly. Children need to know that we mean what we say. Too often, Van Horn said, parents threaten children with no intention of carrying out the threat.

But, he said, "As soon as kids get to be three or four, they read us clearly and know we are just threatening."

By not enforcing the rules you've set up for your child, you are sending him the message "I don't mean what I say," Van Horn noted. And if child doesn't belive your threats, he may not believe you when you say, "I love you."

If you can't follow through on what you say, you're probably saying too much, Van Horn said.

In making up a list of rules, think each one out. Determine those things that are most important to you, then make your list of rules compatible with your values. But keep in mind, Van Horn reminded, "Rules need to be reasonable." Consider your child's age and ability to comply when setting rules.

Once you have compiled the list of rules, make sure your child knows what they are and what the punishment will be if he breaks them. "It's no fair pulling a rule out of the air!" Van Horn noted. "The younger the child the more times it needs to be repeated before it is enforced."

When a child does break a rule, don't get mad or yell — just give him the expected punishment. Chances are, Van Horn said, you won't have to punish the child for the same infraction twice.

Parents should also make a special effort to communicate positive feelings when a child behaves in an acceptable way. Too often adults are quick to point out the negative, while ignoring the positive.

Make an effort to start the day with five good comments to a child, Van Horn encouraged. It will help a child develop the self esteem so essential to success in life.

Extension family living specialist James Van Horn shares some tips on living and communicating with preschool children during an Extension-sponsored program in Lebanon Tuesday evening.

Positive discipline encourages respect

By PETER ROWE
Copley News Service

Disciplinarian, heed thy self.

Jane Nelsen was in the beauty parlor, growing more and more disturbed by the antics of her 11-year-old daughter, when she erupted.

"You are acting like a spoiled brat!" Nelsen yelled.

A normal parental reaction, but Nelsen cringed. After all, she was preparing for a photo session. The picture — in which Nelsen looks calm, collected and neatly coiffed — adorns the back cover of her book "Positive Discipline: Teaching Children Self-Discipline, Responsibility, Cooperation and Problem-Solving Skills."

"I really was ignoring her," Nelsen confessed, "and expecting behavior beyond her level. . . If I had been respectful to her in the first place, I would not have that problem."

So Nelsen took her daughter aside and apologized.

"If I ever tell you you're a spoiled brat," she said, "it's because I'm being one. I'm having a temper tantrum."

That is not the way Nelsen — or most of her peers — was raised. Many parents, she said, start their children off with the "my way or the highway" approach.

And most say that just doesn't work today.

"The authoritarian method was effective when society was set up that way, when Mom did what Dad said, when people got fired when they disobeyed the boss. . . .

"The last frontier is kids," Nelsen said. "They are the only ones we expect to 'do as I say' — yet we don't give them that model."

Parents fear that the alternative is surrendering to the little barbarians: cookies for breakfast, screaming siblings, a house littered with broken toys.

Nelsen, the mother of seven, understands.

"I vacillated between being an authoritarian — spanking, yelling and threatening about the same things over and over, so you know it didn't work — to permissiveness — avoiding bedtime hassles by letting them fall asleep in their clothes before the TV."

But 16 years ago, Nelsen was introduced to the theories of Alfred Adler, a pupil of Freud's. Adler believed in giving children choices — and letting them live with the consequences.

An authoritarian parent might serve oatmeal for breakfast and tell Junior to eat it — or else. A permissive parent might cater to Junior's every culinary whim.

Adler advocated a middle path. Let Junior select his own breakfast, within reason. If he suddenly decides he wants something else, send him from the table. If he returns, remind him he can eat — at lunch.

Nelsen, who holds a doctorate in educational psychology from the University of San Francisco, blended her own ideas to those of Adler and Rudolph Dreikurs, an Adler associate. The result was positive discipline.

"The whole point of positive discipline is to teach self-discipline," she said. "Create an attitude, a feeling, of respect, mutual respect and mutual involvement."

Ongoing problems, Nelsen maintains, can be aired at "family meetings" in which parents and children can arrive at mutually satisfactory solutions.

Faced with a temper tantrum, Nelsen said, "I might still use isolation — 'Go to your room. But when you go to your room, do something to make yourself feel better. When you feel better, we'll talk.'"

Punishment is not the object, Nelsen said. "Where did we get this crazy idea that the way to make children behave better we have to make them feel worse?" she asked.

Featuring Families Self Esteem

Recently while cleaning out the attic, I uncovered an old photo album. On the Kodak paper were captured memories of family times and college days. Fourth of July picnics, camping vacations, swimming in the creek, cookie baking and sweet corn day were pictorial reminders of fun family times together. It also was a reminder to dust off the camera and start capturing current family events.

The time we spend as a family unit has something very special about it. The family is almost always that one group of people who like us just the way we are. We can say and do things with them that we might not say or do with anyone else. It's a comfortable and comforting situation.

Families can enhance this feeling even further by using self-esteem builders. Self-esteem is what makes us feel good about being us, and it's easy to help other people feel good about themselves.

Why is self-esteem so important? I think that to a large extent, the way we feel about ourselves determines a degree of our success in life.

People who feel good about themselves will be willing to take more risks, try things from a different standpoint. They are generally more creative at problem solving. And, as a result, they have a greater opportunity to succeed at challenges taken on in life. A positive self esteem also can help to counteract negative pressures such as stress, change, losses, and limitations.

How can we help others feel good about themselves? Family activities open up a wide opportunity for developig self esteem. Opportunities for encouraging development of self esteem are simple things like treating other family members with respect, and letting them know they are worthwhile. Give others freedom to try new things — even if they may fail. Allow family members to be involved in decision making. And, most of all, we need not accept family members unconditionally.

The wonderful thing about lifting someone else's self-esteem is that it lifts yours too! Many family events go a long way in building self esteem of family members. Below are some suggestions:

- Family Night–an evening once a week where the family chooses an activity to do together
- Family Council–a weekly or bi-monthly meeting where family makes decisions about personal and financial matters as a unit.
- Family Song Fest–sing around the piano or start a family band.
- Family Vacations–do not have to be costly or long to be fun and memorable.
- Family parties for all occasions, including birthdays, new jobs, promotions, passing a difficult test, or even getting a driver's license.
- Ice Cream or Barbeque Night–when family makes and eats the meal together.

As I looked through my photo album, I was reminded of our many family activities. I also realized that family times develop more than family unity and communication. They are a structure that also builds personal self esteem in each member and has a part in the person I've become.

So, I think I'll go buy some film so that I can record my husband's milestone birthday. Who knows, it just may be the reminder of the family strengths and support that will get him through the next 30 years!

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The last few weeks have been busy ones here on the farm.

When I returned from my trip South, I had the garden rototilled and then I planted a dozen or more vegetables. The peas are several inches high and the garden cress, spinach, radishes, chard, lettuce and carrots were some of the first to pop out of the ground. I've never seen onions come up so quickly but I'm resigned to wait a while for the parsley. I'll have fun digging the 200 feet of five different kinds of potatoes that I put in the ground the other week.

Our house was a beehive of activity as our children and grandchildren came home for Easter. When our daughter and her family from Seattle came east for a few days, all of the other children tried to come home too. My grandson, David, and I like to skip stones in the Conestoga River that flows by our meadow. And, he is always interested in watching his grandfather milk the cows in the milk parlor. He insists that they say, "Mmmm" instead of "Moo"–sometimes they do.

Philip drove in from Chicago to help his father haul manure from the slated-dam pit. One day he hauled 27 loads and the next day a bearing broke in the spreader and nowhere in Lancaster County nor three surrounding counties could we find one. So, he went back a day earlier than expected to his job as a design engineer for a farm machinery company.

Then the other Saturday Allen and I visited our daughter in Tunkhannock for the first time. She has been employed as an industrial engineer there for almost a year. The incentive to go was furnished by the need to take a big sofa that her sister had in her apartment,to her new home. It was a long day as we had our Foot & Fiddle square dance meeting in Lancaster that night also.

Positive discipline

Nelsen tested her theories while working as an elementary school counselor in Northern California and in her Project ACCEPT — Adlerian Counseling Concepts for Encouraging Parents and Teachers — workshops, which have been held throughout California. When the book used in the seminars went out of print, she wrote "Positive Discipline."

In 1981, she formed the "Sunrise Press" in her Fair Oaks, Calif., home and started publishing. "I printed 2,000 copies," she said. "I was sure that I would sit on 1,000 of them forever."

Within a year all 2,000 were sold. Nelsen printed another 5,000. They sold.

The book refused to die. "I went to Florida for six months," Nelsen said. "While I was gone, I sold $10,000 of the books through mail order

"That's when I realized, 'My goodness, what would happen if I tried?'"

In December 1985, Nelsen came out with a slick paperback edition of "Positive Discipline" and set off on a book tour. By January, 18,000 copies had been sold. Later that month, she flew to Brussels to address a conference of European teachers on applying her techniques to the classroom.

All with the support of her third husband, Barry Nelsen.

Super Mom? Forget it. Nelsen reserves the right to err — "Mistakes are wonderful opportunities to learn" — and is uncomfortable on a pedestal.

"I hate Mother's Day," she said.

"Mother's Day is the one time that mothers feel guilty. There are all these accolades that mothers are wonderful and perfect, but most mothers aren't perfect so they feel guilty."

Delaware teens attend National 4-H Conference

NEWARK, DE — Four Delaware teens were in Chevy Chase, Md., last week as delegates to the 56th National 4-H Conference. They are Marie Waters, Wilmington; Nancy Walsh, Greenville; Kirsten Smoot, Dover; and Christine Jernigan, Seaford. Lois Hall, a Hockessin volunteer leader, and Marcius Butterfield, state 4-H Leader, accompanied them.

The focus of the annual conference is program development and public relations efforts. Delegates were chosen for their leadership potential and participation in 4-H activities.

Marie Waters, 17, is a senior at Delcastle Technical High School studying medical laboratory assisting. She is a six-year 4-H'er who won this year's senior division of the favorite foods contest in the meat and main dish category. Marie is a member of New Castle County's 4-H Junior Council.

Fifteen-year-old Nancy Walsh is in her fifth year of 4-H. The A.I. Du Pont High School freshman was a state winner in public speaking and is the assistant treasurer of the New Castle County 4-H Junior Council.

Kirsten Smoot, 17, is a sophomore at Caesar Rodney High School. She is a six-year 4-H'er and won the state award in leadership. She has been the Kent County 4-H Junior Council treasurer for two years.

Christine Jernigan, freshman at Salisbury State College, has been a 4-H'er for eight years. The 18-year-old art major was a 1984 national 4-H winner with her swine project. She has held numerous offices in her local club, is on the 4-H advisory council at county and state levels, and is president of the Sussex County 4-H Junior Council.

The Delaware delegates are joining other 4-H'ers from the United States, Puerto Rico, Guam, Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the Canadian provinces. During the conference they will listen to business and industry leaders, meet with congressional representatives, and discuss future state and national 4-H programs.

Are You Letting Stray Voltage Milk Your Profits?

You could be and you might not even know it. University studies show it may make your herd difficult to handle, increase mastitis, and ultimately lead to an overall decrease in your production and profits.

Using computer technology, our survey documents the level of stray voltage and shows you when and where it occurs on your farm.

From the survey report you can determine if stray voltage is milking your profits. If it is, Blackburn has the only guaranteed method of reducing it from both on and off-farm sources.

When we make it so easy to detect and reduce stray voltage it makes sense to find out if your milk output and herd health is less than it could be.

To learn more about stray voltage and its effects call for our free brochure or arrange for a detection survey. We'll put your farm to the test. And put your mind at ease.

Somerset County 4-H receives national award

UNIVERSITY PARK — For the second year in a row, Somerset County has won top national honors for its outstanding 4-H safety program. This year's winning program is called "Kids in Safety Seats."

The program was awarded a share of General Motors stock from the General Motors Foundation which will be used to further the safety activities among 4-H'ers in Somerset County.

The County 4-H Council organized KISS in 1984 through a "Kids Concerned for Kids" campaign to inform 4-H families and the community about car seats and the car seat law that became effective January 1, 1985. Through radio commercials and newspaper articles, the public was made aware of the critical need for child safety in automobiles.

Since then, many 4-H meetings and demonstrations have been held and literature distributed pertaining to the law and types of infant seats available. More than $1,300 has been raised to make rental seats available to parents who do not already have them. The seats are available for loan to the community through two local hospitals to encourage safety and compliance with the child car seat law.

Last year, the county won with a program focused on a Rabies Clinic Week. The Council was previously recognized for its KISS program by the PA Agricultural Safety Council in April of 1985 and the National Safety Council in February of this year.

Stewartstown 4-H Club to sponsor clinic

STEWARTSTOWN — Four more confirmed cases of rabies were found in York County last week and a local 4-H Club plans to do its part to help combat the threat.

For the third year the Stewartstown 4-H Community Club will hold an annual Rabies Clinic, where pet owners can bring their animals for protective vaccinations against the deadly disease.

The clinic is scheduled for Friday, April 25, from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Eureka Fire Hall, north of Stewartstown on Route 24. Vaccinations are $4 per animal, and all animals brought to the clinic must be restrained in some way.

"Seven dogs in the Stewartstown area have been put down in the last three months due to the rabies problem," says Norma Warner, organizational leader of the Stewartstown Club.

Dr. Elizabeth Preston will represent the York-Adams Veterinary Association at the clinic, and perform the vaccinations. Club representatives are in charge of handling the forms, with proceeds of the clinic to benefit the Stewartstown 4-H Club.

According to Dr. Preston, raccoons continue to be the most prominent carriers of the rabies epidemic that has swept up the East Coast over the past few years.

"Animals exposed to rabies must be destroyed, or quarantined for six months," says the Stewartstown veterinarian. "That's why we recommend that rabies shots be given."

For additional information, contact Norma Warner, 717-993-2919.

POTTSTOWN — Two hundred FFA members, parents, faculty members, district administrators and guests recently celebrated the 49th annual Owen J. Roberts FFA banquet.

One of the highlights of the evening was the presentation of the Honorary Chapter degree given each year to an outstanding person or persons in our community. This year the Honorary Chapter degree was given to Mr. Kenneth Brown, farm manager for the Sam Morris farm at Pughtown, honored for his role in the agricultural placement of students and graduates of the Vo-Ag department at Owen J. Roberts.

Mrs. Virginia Umstead, O.J.R. switchboard operator and receptionist for the last 24 years, was also awarded the Honorary degree. Her involvement with the high school students, particularly with the FFA students, was pointed out in the ceremony conducted by the chapter officers.

After opening remarks by Mr. Joseph Jackson, assistant high school principal, the FFA students presented their own slide show entitled "FFA In Action." The slides depicted each student's out-of-school project as well as a view of their in school activities.

Chester W. Raught, vo-ag teacher and FFA advisor, presented the student's awards. Among those students receiving awards were Nathan Bixler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Bixler, RD2, Phoenixville; and Steven Cook, son of Dr. and Mrs. Donald Cook, Birchrunville. Both won trophies for their dairy goat projects. Steven also was named Star Greenhand which is given to "the outstanding first year Vo-Ag student" and he received a bronze medal for his project book at the state project book contest.

James Gebhard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gebhard, 513 Kline Ave., Pottstown, won the high citrus salesperson award.

Michael Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hall, Star Route, St. Peters, and Samuel Hultz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hultz, RD1, Spring City, both won cash prizes by finishing first and second in the chapter Creed Speaking Contest.

In the working for experience off-farm category, Kenneth Shellenberger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Shellenberger, 1053 School House Road, Pottstown, was awarded the trophy.

The on-farming for experience trophy was awarded to Douglass March, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank March, Jr., RD1 Glenmoore. Douglass also won a gold medal at the state level. Second in the same category with a silver medal was Samuel Tkaczuk, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Tkaczuk, RD2 Elverson, and winning third place and a bronze medal was Kenneth Soltys, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester H. Soltys, Jr., 876 New Schuylkill Road, Spring City.

Kenneth Soltys, chapter president, also received first place in the field corn contest with 191.3 bushels per acre. Harry Lilley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lilley, RD Glenmoore, was second with a yield of 190.1 bushels per acre.

Soltys was awarded a trophy for his projects on diversified farming. He also won a gold medal at the state contest for this book. In addition, Ken and Sam Tkaczuk were given plaques for being named winners of the Keystone Farmer Degree.

Among Soltys' other honors was being awarded the Farm Credit Award for having the best FFA record book in Chester County. He also won the Neal R. Burtner Award, which is presented to the senior who exhibits leadership in the chapter and agricultural community. Ken Soltys will be attending Penn State next fall and plans to major in agricultural business.

Families invited to host exchange students

Qualified host families are now being sought for World Exchange international exchange students. These students will spend four weeks this summer experiencing the United States with an American family while participating in their daily life.

World Exchange, a non-profit organization, is searching for American families excited by the prospect of sharing their homes with a European exchange student.

Host families provide room and board for the student and offer him or her the same guidance and love they give to their own children.

By sharing their daily life with a student from another country, the family members will have a unique opportunity to learn about another culture through another person's eyes, while deepening their appreciation of their own country by introducing America to someone new.

Families interested in participating in this program can receive more information by contacting their local program director; Loreley N. Bitner, 1935 Split Rock Rd., Lancaster, Pa. 17601, Tel. 717/569-4664.

"CLEAN FLOW"

Stakeless Bodies by OMAHA STANDARD

- 52" or 60" heavy gauge sides give you more hauling capacity for grain, sugar beets and other commodities
- "Clean Flow" design of the extra deep 30° sidewall corrugations allows complete emptying with no sharp corners for grain to hang up.
- Greater inside width and length make this an ideal body for hauling bagged or palletized products.
- Standard three section full opening rear doors.
- Complete your "Grain Power" package with an Omaha Standard work-proven hoist. Choose from the most complete line of scissor or stabilized "Olympic" telescopic hoists.
- Compare any of Omaha Standard's full line of steel, aluminum or wood grain bodies and rugged hoists...you'll know why Omaha Standard is the most respected name at work on the farm today.

Path of progress leads dairy farmers to maple sugaring

BY DONNA TRUESDELL
Staff Correspondent

ACWORTH, NH – From dairy farming to second largest producer of maple syrup in the United States — this is the path of progress that has been followed at Ken and Bruce Bascom's family farm.

Ken is the fifth or sixth generation to sugar and his son Bruce will soon be taking over the business. However, sugaring was only a side-line during their dairying years. The Bascom's herd of 50 Holsteins was sold in 1964. This was a very difficult decision for the Bascoms because Ken had raised nearly all of the herd himself.

Currently the farm operation includes sugaring and related maple equipment business as well as some production and sale of hay. The farm consists of 600 acres with approximately 500 of that being woodland. Two neighboring farms were recently purchased to prevent development by contractors. Ken believes that "once the land is paved over, you won't get it back."

His son Bruce sees sugaring as a possible way for troubled farmers to increase the income from their land and thus possibly save more farms. Many New England and Mid-Atlantic farms include sugar maples along the road (known as road trees) or in the woodlands. "There is the potential to increase gross income by $5,000 to $10,000 a year through sugaring," predicts Bruce.

Sugar maples are an "untapped" resource on many farms. Another advantage is that the sugaring season usually runs from mid-February to mid-April. This is often a slow time in terms of work on the farm.

Sugaring at Bascom's began in the 1800's on the original homestead which is one mile away from the current Bascom's Sugarhouse. Bruce is very knowledgeable in local history and notes there were 180 active sugarbushes (orchards of sugar maples) in the late 1880's in Acworth. Now there are only eight. At that time New Hampshire was 85 percent open land compared to the current 8 percent. Some old sugarbushes still remain in the area, but most have not been maintained or replaced.

In the late 1800's nearly every farmer made maple syrup, perhaps because there really wasn't a market for milk. Maple was also the main source of sugar. It was found in every general store from New England to the Midwest.

Maple sugar was stored in large blocks which were scraped or broken to obtain the amount of sugar to be sold. With the production of cane sugar, the market for maple has changed to syrup primarily. Since that time the maple business has declined considerably in terms of amount of product produced. Bruce Bascom believes that maple sugaring could be rediscovered as the farm economy changes.

At Bascom's being on the forefront of new developments in sugaring has been a philosophy. In 1939 with 600 buckets and production of 100 to 150 gallons of syrup, they began using tractors instead of horses to collect the sap. Over the years as neighbors stopped sugaring, the Bascoms added more taps and buckets.

In 1950 tubing was used for the first time. "Tubing" involves attaching plastic pipe to the taps rather than handing a bucket on the spout. Tubing was still in the experimental stage and was laid on the ground then. After six or seven years of research, tubing was suspended in the air between the trees and a better method of sealing it around the taps was developed. Following this, vacuum pumps were used to pull on the tubing, bringing more sap out of the tree.

Tubing has been a great labor saving advance. In 1955 Ken Bascom had 5,500 buckets set; today they have 32,000 taps. One man can collect as much sap in two hours from tubing using a pump and tank mounted on a truck as five men could collect in one day from buckets. Bruce Bascom took tubing one step farther when he and three others formed the U.S. Maple company, which produces and sells tubing and fittings.

Bascom's Sugarhouse is a family operation which includes: (front) Cindy, Ruth, Keith; (back) Liz, Bruce and Ken Bascom.

Bascoms also uses the reverse osmosis process in sugaring. This is a machine which exerts 500 pounds of pressure on the sap, forcing the water in the sap through a membrane and resulting in a solution of 6 to 8 percent sugar. If sap is left overnight to circulate through this machine it may reach a sugar content of 20 percent.

There are several advantages to this system including: less boiling equipment is needed yet production of syrup is increased, less fuel is used to heat the sap, and the grade of syrup will be better because it is not over the heat as long.

Sugaring itself begins at Bascoms around Feb. 14 when they begin to tap. The total process of "setting" trees takes ten days and the first "run" of sap usually occurs at the end of February. Sugaring depends a great deal on the weather with nights in the 20's and days in the 40 to 50 degree range being the best. The vacuum pumps used on the tubing at Bascom's are controlled by thermostats which start the pump when the temperature is above freezing.

One 5,000-tap section of tubing at Bascom's is located below the sugarhouse. In this case the sap is sucked down to the valley and is then pumped back up to the sugarhouse by a deep well pump operating on a float system in the collection tank.

After going through reverse osmosis the sap enters a heat exchanger system which brings the temperature of the sap to 200°F. by circulating it through copper pipes surrounded by steam. Following this preheating it enters the evaporator pan where the water is boiled off to make syrup.

The Bascom's evaporator pan was custom made in St. Louis two years ago. The boiler under the pan uses oil for fuel and produces steam which is piped in to result in a "steam-jacketed pan." The bottom of the evaporator pan reaches a temperature of 300°F. yet does not burn the syrup due to the new steam system. A suction fan over the evaporator pulls the steam out of the sugarhouse.

It takes approximately 40 gallons of sap to make one gallon of maple syrup. This may vary slightly depending on the sweetness of the sap. Approximately 20 minutes after the sap enters the pan it is boiled down to syrup. The evaporator at Bascoms typically produces around 40 gallons of syrup an hour.

From the evaporator the syrup is pumped through a filter press which uses pressure to filter out sugar sand. This is a granular substance like sand which is in the syrup. Liz Bascom explained that sugar sand is pulled by the sap from the rocky soils which the sugar or "rock" maples grow well in.

In a free moment Ken Bascom quenches his thirst with sap collected in an antique wooden sap bucket.

After filtering, the syrup is graded by comparing the color to that of a standard for each grade. Maple syrup is graded primarily by color, although flavor is a consideration and must match the color produced.

The grades of syrup include Grade A light amber, medium amber, and dark amber. All of these are table grades of syrup in which the color and richness of the flavor vary. Light amber typically has a delicate flavor while dark amber has a more robust taste. Pure maple syrup is all maple as compared to the typical pancake syrup purchased in the grocery store which is made of corn syrup, sugar, water, and only 2 percent maple syrup.

Maple syrup is also used in commercial food production and in commercial baking. Grade B Cooking Syrup is used for this purpose and is a darker, more strong flavored syrup.

At Bascom's Sugarhouse the syrup is stored in 30-gallon drums or in 2,000-gallon storage tanks in their warehouse. Inside the storage tanks is an ultraviolet light which kills any bacteria that may enter the tank as it is vented while the syrup is pumped in. In order to use the storage tanks Bascoms must have large quantities of the same grade of syrup.

The syrup is recanned in retail containers as needed. It must be heated to 200°F. before canning to kill any bacteria. Bascoms sells their syrup on both a retail and wholesale basis. They have established much business in selling to corporations. In this case they can syrup in the corporation's container, add a gift card, and ship as requested. They have even secured a contract to sell syrup into England.

The buying and selling of bulk syrup has become almost a second business for the Bascom family. Currently under construction is a 50 x 120-foot two-story warehouse for storage of maple equipment and bulk syrup.

Although Bascom's Sugarhouse and maple business has expanded greatly over the past years, it continues to be a family business. Currently Ken and Bruce share the business equally. In five years Ken looks forward to fulfillment of their plans for his retirement when he will decrease his workload

Liz, Bruce's wife, works in the sugarhouse and conducts tours of the sugarhouse for visitors. Ruth, Ken's wife, bakes her special Maple Pecan Pie during the maple season which she sells at their retail display.

Despite an extremely poor year for sugaring in 1986, the Bascom family has found sugaring to be a "sweet" enterprise for their New Hampshire family farm.

USDA takes action against meatpacking firm

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has ordered the denial of its meat inspection services for five years to a Pennsylvania meatpacking company. However, the order will be held in abeyance as long as the company commits no violations of a consent agreement between it and USDA.

"A USDA administrative law judge ordered the denial of inspection services to Tri-States Meats and Provisions of Linwood (southwest of Philadelphia), on Feb. 18, based on a previous withdrawal order against Summit Beef Company and any of its successors," said Donald L. Houston, Administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

"Tri-States Meats and Provisions is operating out of the same facility that Summit Beef Company formerly occupied," explained Houston. "Tri-States' owner is Mark S. Perry, the son of Vincent L. Perry who owned and operated Summit Beef."

Houston said the denial will not take effect as long as Tri-States adheres to federal meat inspection laws and meets additional specified conditions listed in the consent order.

The original withdrawal order was issued against Summit Beef based on felony convictions of Vincent Perry on charges of conspiracy to transmit wager information, drug trafficking, and conspiring to sell uninspected meat for human consumption in violation of federal meat inspection laws.

Case International 94 Series Tractors

Exclusive Intelligence Center makes you and your tractor more productive

The exclusive Intelligence Center enables you to work more efficiently by monitoring vital tractor functions. Travel speed, engine and PTO RPM, total acres worked, acres per hour and much more are available in instant digital readouts. The optional True Ground Speed Sensor even tells you the percent of the wheel slip so you can select the most efficient gear and weight your tractor properly. It all adds up to getting more work out of each hour of time and squeezing more work out of each gallon of fuel.

All this, plus: High-torque power that's teamed with a smooth 12-speed power shift transmission for a job-right speed on every job (24-speed power shift is optional for the 2394, 2594); CON TROL PFC hydraulics that reduce parasitic hp loss; and the comfort and convenience that only the Silent Guardian cab can provide.

THE WORK HORSE

Here is a NEW skid loader that will haul, dig, move palletized material, trench, load, scrape, and more, with an SAE operating capacity of 2,050 pounds!

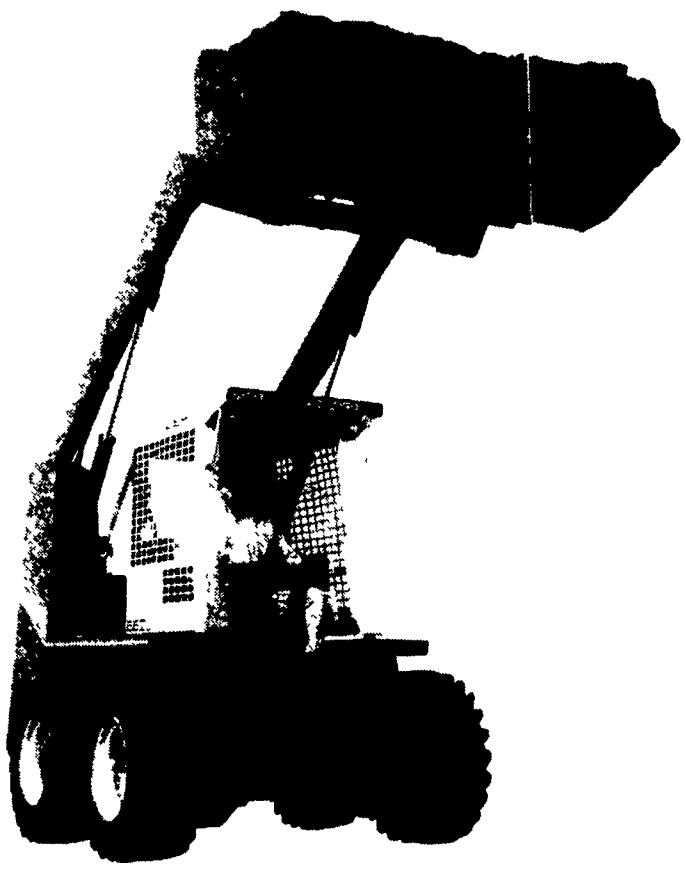
It's the new Gehl 6620, with a 60 hp diesel powerplant plus all the operational and convenience features you'd expect from a Gehl loader. And it outreaches every other loader in its size category.

This is a totally universal loader that's designed to handle your toughest jobs with brute strength while you maintain fine-tuned control over its entire operation.

Self-leveling lift action lets you concentrate on where you want to put your load. Split, side-mounted T-bar Load-Trak controls, the easiest-to-learn system available today. Secondary operator restraint seat bar with padded arm rests. Full instrumentation.

Front hydraulics make the 6620 compatible with a wide variety of attachments. Roll-back ROPS/FOPS for easy power and drive train accessiblity.

With years of skid loader ancestry, the 6620 is a powerful machine that could only come from Gehl. Take a performance test drive. You'll never settle for conventional skid loader performance again.



Lift.
Dig.

UNMATCHED SERVICEABILITY

Rollback ROPS/FOPS

The entire ROPS/FOPS structure rolls back and out of the way and locks in up position for full and easy access to drive and hydraulic components. This structure is spring counter-balanced for easy, one-man rollback. The wiring harness stays intact for better serviceability.

Once the ROPS/FOPS is rolled back the engine and driveline are fully accessible for service. No crowding or extraneous plumbing; just well laid-out. Designed with the service technician in mind.

NO. 1 DAIRYING DIESEL

KHD DEUTZ

Since 1968 F2L-912 diesels have earned the reputation as the most reliable diesel. Don't settle for less.

EASIER STARTING: Heavy flywheel provides easy starting. No electric heater plugs.

QUIETER: Runs quieter than most water cooled diesels. Very quiet exhaust.

New Rating
29.5 HP @ 2000 RPM
22 HP @ 1500 RPM

Fewer repair parts than comparable three-cylinder diesels - cheaper to overhaul.

It has direct injection, lube oil cooling, and oil cooled pistons. This engine has proven to survive the extreme heat of a heavy load in a small engine house better than any other engine.

PLUS - FAMOUS DEUTZ FUEL ECONOMY

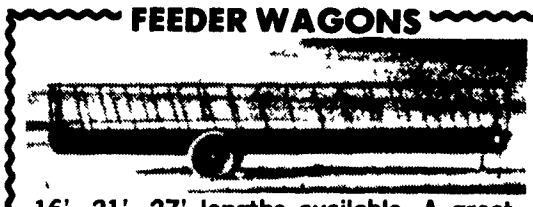
FEEDER WAGONS



16', 21', 27' lengths available. A great feature for feeding cattle in meadows or in feed lots. Can be used for feeding round bales.
If old gas tanks are used for feeder wagon bottoms, they should be sand blasted. If not, the gas and rust may result in sick cattle or even death. Be safe and buy from us as ours are sand blasted before being painted.

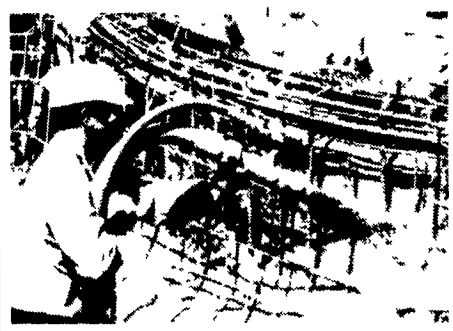
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

S & S Silo Service Has Experience
Over 160 Silos Have Been Relined With Shotcrete



S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

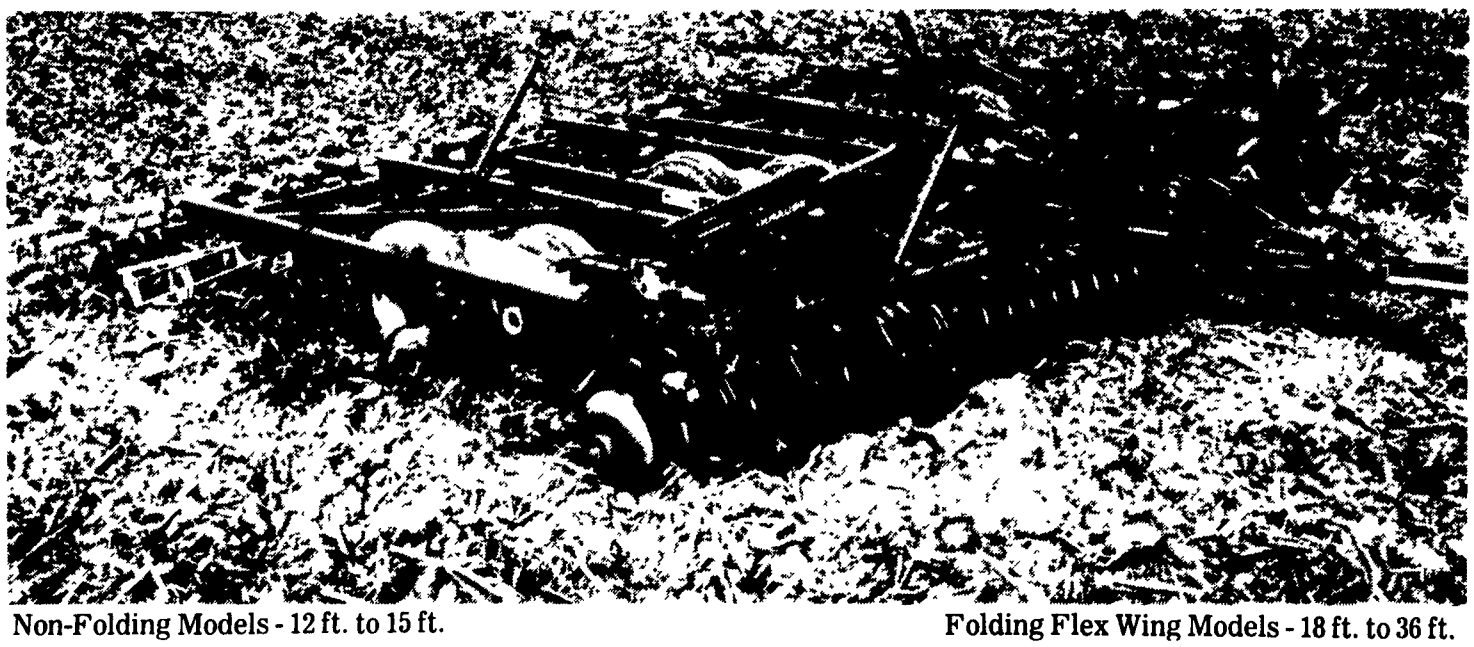
THE LANDSMAN

by Krause

An Implement That Can Cut Time And Labor Costs By 50%

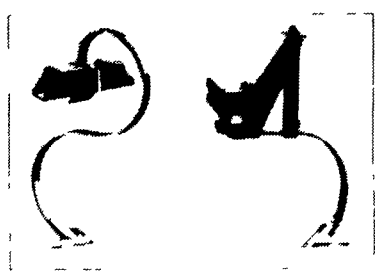


Non-Folding Models - 12 ft. to 15 ft. Folding Flex Wing Models - 18 ft. to 36 ft.

Preparing a seedbed used to take a lot of time, a lot of fuel, and a lot of money.

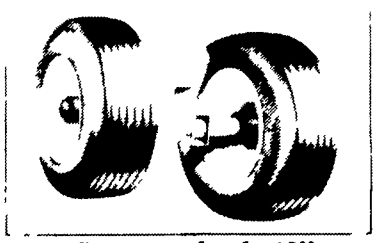
But now there's a smarter way to get the job done — with a Krause Landsman. It's a unique tillage implement that discs, incorporates chemicals (either deep or shallow), cultivates, and finishes all at once — to prepare your seedbeds with just one pass.

Built with heavy-duty features like these:



Choice of two cultivator shanks, both offering 25" of clearance under frame... Spring-cushioned shanks have rear-mounted shock and come with 10" sweeps. Heavy-duty "K-Tine™" shanks feature a high point load to keep sweeps level and still provide aggressive mixing action.

Massive hitch is an extra-heavy design, proven on Krause disc harrows. It is spring-cushioned to reduce frame stress on uneven ground — a feature most competitors don't offer. Built from heavy 4"x6" steel tubing.



Walking tandem wheels flex over obstacles individually and follow contour of the land for uniform working depth. Staggered only 18" so you can make tight turns without harmful side loading. Regreaseable bearings.

Sheep and Cattle Can Be Partners

The most unique factor of animal agriculture in the Northeast region is the abundance of forage. The rainfall and temperature in the region is ideal for cool season grasses, legumes and brassicas which can be pastured for animal production. In addition, soil types respond to treatment and management.

A recent seminar conducted by Winrock International compiled and presented both international and U.S. research data showing that grazing sheep and cattle together can benefit both the pasture and the animals.

Both New Zealand and Colorado grazing trials have shown the carrying capacity of pastureland to be increased by 15 to 23 percent when sheep and cattled grazed together. The reason appears to be simple: "Cattle and sheep prefer to eat different things," explains former researcher Dr. Wayne Cook, range scientist, Colorado State University. Generally, he says, cattle prefer the more mature grasses and sheep prefer to browse the forbes or broadleaf plants. And, as Cook explains, when both types of foliage are kept in check, the regrowth patterns under controlled grazing management will produce better pasture yields.

Virginia livestock producers have shown that no additional agronomic inputs are needed when adding one mature breeding ewe for every beef cow. The assumption, of course is the carrying capacity is in balance with the established pasture program.

Ewe Profitability

The question most frequently asked with today's depressed farm beef and pork prices is, "How much money can I make with sheep?" The influence ewe and lamb management has on lambing percentage and the associated lamb market price are factors to reckon with when one looks at net profit per ewe.

The information in Table 1, shown below, correlates lambing percent to market price and gives the projected profit or loss/ewe for any combination of these two factors. All values are based on total costs/ewe at $85 and market lamb weights of 110 lbs.

	Ewe Profitability[1] Market Price ($/cwt)
Lambing %	55	60	65
150	5.57	14.00	22.25
140	-0.80	7.40	15.10
130	-6.35	0.80	7.95
120	-12.40	-5.80	0.80

USDA revises meat labeling standards

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The U.S. Department of Agriculture today announced it is restricting its definitions for the terms "lite" and "lean" and other fat claims used on meat and poultry labels to reflect more accurately a product's fat content. USDA also is requiring specific labeling information on products using these terms.

Processors will have one year to change their labels in accordance with the new requirements.

"Today, consumers are more conscious of the fat content of their diet and many are concerned that 'low fat' and other fat claims are made for products that are relatively high in fat," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "We need to ensure that labeling information on fat content of meat and poultry products is clear and not misleading. At the same time, we don't want to be so strict with our labeling standards that we discourage industry from producing lower-fat products."

Under the new policy, the term "extra lean" will be reserved for products containing no more than five percent fat. Processors must disclose the actual amount of fat on the product label–for example, "This product contains 4 percent fat."

The terms "lean" and "low fat" can be used only on products containing less than 10 percent fat, and the amount of fat must be stated on the label.

The terms "light," "lite," "leaner" and "low fat" can be used on products containing at least 25 percent less fat than the majority of such products in the marketplace. A statement explaining the comparison must be included on the label. For example, the label for "Leaner Ground Beef" might include "This product contains 20 percent fat, which is 33 percent less fat than is in most ground beef."

In addition, the terms "lean," "lite" or other fat claims can be part of fanciful names, brand names and trademarks only if the product meets the requirements for that claim and if the claim is explained on the label. This restriction, however, does not apply to the use of these terms on brand-name products like frozen dinners and entrees when the terms indicate a product's usefulness in calorie control. Labels on these products must carry nutrition labeling that includes the fat content.

Previous labeling requirements allowed fat claims such as "lite," "lean" and "extra lean" to be used interchangeably on meat and poultry products containing 25 percent less fat than a comparable product and on products containing no more than 10 percent fat.

Maryland plans 'bigger and better' Lamb and Wool Festival

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md. – More of everything is in store for visitors to the 13th annual Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival to be held May 3 and 4 at the Howard County Fairgrounds, West Friendship, Md., according to Mary E. F. Streaker, chairman. West Friendship is located between Baltimore and Frederick, Md. just off I-70.

A total of 539 sheep entries from 69 consignors will participate in either one or more of six sheep shows. Border Leicesters will start the shows at 9 a.m. Saturday, followed by Romneys and Corriedales. Natural colored sheep will show at 12:30 p.m. Saturday. Columbia sheep will lead off at 8 a.m. Sunday, followed by white wool sheep and selection of supreme champions. Columbias and Corriedales are new to the show this year. Other events are a carcass contest and a feeder lamb show and sale.

An auction will be held following the shows at 3 p.m. Sunday, where only high quality sheep will be offered, assures Jack Price, sale chairman. Thirty two ewes and 24 rams have been nominated for the sale.

More than 150 crafts persons will be exhibiting their wares, and the latest in sheep handling equipment and fencing will be displayed.

With the addition of a building which houses a demonstration kitchen the lamb cooking contest has been greatly expanded. Both senior and junior cook-off contests will be staged and professional meat cutters and chefs will conduct demonstrations on lamb cutting and cookery.

Two seminars are scheduled–the first on wool grading and judging at 7 p.m. Friday. All sheep judges on the Maryland official judges' list have been invited. The second seminar will be a sheep showing workshop at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Both white and natural colored fleeces will compete for prizes. Only those entered in competition will be judged. All fleeces, competition or not, are priced by producers and the festival acts as "middle man" to bring buyer and seller together.

One barn will be devoted to breeds of sheep not ordinarily seen at local sheep shows. It is customary to display at least 30 different breeds in this area. Such eye catchers as four-horned Jacob sheep may be viewed here.

Other competitions include sheep to shawl, junior spinning, shearing, queen shepherd's lead, skein and garment, photography and fine arts. There will be shearing demonstrations and working sheep dog demonstrations.

Admission and parking are free and there will be a variety of lamb dishes and other foods to purchase. For further information contact Mary Streaker, 301-321-1344; or Ernest Hall, 301-845-8744.

Polled Hereford events scheduled

LANCASTER – Within the next two weeks two major Polled Hereford events will take place in the Keystone State.

On April 25, the Northwest Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Association will hold its show and sale at the Mercer 4-H Park in Mercer County. Judging the show will be Glenn Eberly, director of the Meat Animal Evaluation Center at State College. The 31-head show gets underway at 2 p.m., followed by the sale at 7 p.m. For information contact Stanley Hunt, 412-368-8359.

The Bedford County Fairgrounds will be the site of the Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Association's Spring Show and Sale on May 3. Judging the 32-head show will be Gail Long, manager of Nittany Farms, State College. The show is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. with the sale following at 1 p.m. For information contact Sam Hunter, 301-824-4771.

Commercial producers seminar to highlight Sheep and Wool Festival

COCHRANVILLE – Three producers who collectively produce, feed out and market over 4,000 lambs annually will share their management expertise with new and experienced shepherds at a seminar on commercial market lamb production during the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival at the Howard County Fair Grounds, West Friendship, Maryland on May 3.

Responding to a growing interest in lamb production, the Pennsylvania-Maryland Shropshire Association is sponsoring the seminar to aid all those who are interested in the sheep business.

While the farm economy sags in most areas, commercial lamb production is becoming more profitable with market prices for slaughter lambs reaching new highs. The recent establishment of two new lamb slaughtering plants in Pennsylvania and Virginia have added impetus to the sheep business. Facilities, feeding, health care and marketing will be covered in the seminar. In addition to the participating producers, two marketing agents will be on the panel. The seminar will be held in the cafeteria at the fair grounds and will begin at 1 p.m.

David Albert of Trout Run, who feeds out 3,000 market lambs and runs a 400-ewe flock will be one of the producer panelists. The Rev. Victor Decker of Tunkhannock, also will be one of the speakers. Decker, in addition to being a fulltime clergyman, has a commercial flock of 250 ewes lambing three times a year.

Panelist Pam Karner, VMD, and husband Tim Wills-Allen have recently moved their 250 plus ewe flock from Chadds Ford to Ithaca, N.Y. Dr. Karner, formerly on the staff at the University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center, now has her own private practice with a special interest in small ruminants. Dr. Karner not only will discuss the management techniques employed on her farm, which includes plastic housing and five lambings a year, but will also talk about health maintenance in a large flock. Karner's husband, an Australian, has brought many innovative management techniques to their sheep enterprise.

With lamb prices at the Lancaster Stockyards consistently higher than any other market in the country, Ken Smoker, of Walter M. Dunlap and Sons, Lancaster Stockyards, will discuss eastern lamb markets and the type of lamb buyers want. William R. Reid from Wolgemuth Bros., Inc., Mt. Joy, will represent Rocco, one of the new lamb slaughtering facilites. Reid will explain Rocco's contract feeding program.

Moderator for the seminar will be Annette Menhennett from Cochranville. The Menhennetts have a flock 100 purebred Shropshires. There is no admission charge for the seminar. The Howard County Fairgrounds are located on Rt. 144 and Fairground Road, just off Route 70N at West Friendship, Maryland. For more information about the seminar, contact Annette Menhennett, Box 88A Bryson Road, Cochranville, PA 19330, telephone 215-593-5726.

NEWARK, Del. — Now's the time for sheep owners to prepare to shear their flocks. "All too often, people wait until the last minute to contact a shearer," says University of Delaware extension agricultural agent Richard Braczewski. "As a result, their sheep aren't shorn until after the annual wool pool, which means they could have difficulty finding buyers for their wool."

Barczewski suggests producers arrange now for a late April or early May shearing date.

"Producer and shearer have certain resonsibilities to each other," the agent says. To make it easier for shearers, he suggests shepherds take the following steps:

- Be prepared. Have the shearing area ready before the shearer gets there.
- Pen the sheep ahead of time. Don't expect the shearer to chase them.
- Make sure the animals are dry. "There's nothing more frustrating to a shearer than driving out to a farm expecting to do a job that can't even be started," Barczewski says.
- Be prepared to roll and tie the fleeces. Generally there's enough time to do this before catching another sheep for the shearer. Be sure to use paper twine only.
- Keep the work area clean. The best surface for shearing is wood. Have a broom handy to sweep away tags and dirt so clean fleeces won't be contaminated.
- Don't expect to trim feet and deworm animals while they're being shorn. Shearers usually don't mind if these procedures are completed before or after shearing, provided there are enough lambs to keep things moving smoothly while they work.

In return for this cooperation, the shearer should do a clean, smooth job, removing all the wool (including wool on heads and legs) without excessively nicking or cutting the sheep and without second cuts to fleeces. The shearer should also keep each fleece in one piece, and treat animals gently.

Shearers generally carry 100 feet of extension cord for use with electric shears, Barczewski says. Some also carry a supply of paper twine, but check ahead of time. The producer may need to provide this.

Shearing prices vary depending on the number of sheep to be shorn and travel distance to the farm. With only one or two animals, the price could be as high as $20 a head. Usually, the bigger the flock, the lower the price.

B&B to hold 'Top of Class' lamb sale

MANHEIM — Young livestock exhibitors will have a new opportunity to purchase project lambs when B&B Livestock of Danville, Ohio, stages its first annual market lamb sale at the Manheim Fairgrounds on April 26.

A major show contender throughout the East and Midwest, B&B bred the 1984 Farm Show champion market lamb, as well as the 1985 reserve champion.

Approximately 65 market lambs will be offered, including Suffolks, Hampshires, black-faced crosses and Dorsets. All lambs will be castrated and vaccinated, and will weigh between 50 and 70 pounds.

Lambs will be penned, numbered, and weighed by 4 p.m. on Friday and will be available for inspection by prospective buyers. The Manheim Fairgrounds is located near the high school in Manheim, off Route 72 and within easy reach of the turnpike. The sale will begin at 1 p.m. on Saturday.

In addition to market lambs, 10 registered ewe lambs will be offered, including consignments from Turtle Mead Farm, Sinking Springs; Nix Besser Farm, Narvon; and B&B Livestock.

For further information, contact Christian Herr, 717-783-3193 (days) or 657-8147 (evenings).

Prices steady at Angus On Parade Sale

HARRISBURG — Prices held up well throughout this year's Angus On Parade Sale, according to Pennsylvania Angus Association secretary, Chet Hughes. Held at the Farm Show Complex last Saturday, the event's average price was $1,215 for the 48 lots sold.

The sale's top female was Eberlys Black Lucie H29, a March, 1985 Pine Drive daughter owned by Glenn Eberly, director of the Meat Animal Evaluation Center in State College. She was purchased by Kennley Conner of Buffalo, Kentucky, for $3,800.

The sale's number-two heifer was a New Yorker daughter consigned by Frank Walton of Fox Hill Farm, Kennett Square. Fox Hill Jestress Gal T18 went to Harry Bachman of The Colonel's Angus, Annville, for $2,300.

A Glenn Eberly consignment also topped the bred heifers, a new category in this year's sale. GDE Queen Lassie GD5, a Pine Drive daughter, sold to Herr Angus of Nottingham for $1,550. She was sold with her calf at side, sired by Gunston Tall Texan.

Herr Angus sold the top cow, a Power Play daughter named Grist Mill Mistress. She went to Fox Fire Farm of Avella, for the top bid of $1,650.

The sale's only embryo was consigned by Jim Eisenhour of Cedar Hill Angus, Wellsville. Sired by Waldeck Shocker and out of Garney Annabelle 4108, the calf is due in September. The embryo sold to T&J Farms, Dover, for $1,850.

The sale's top bull was Extension, owned by Hughes Angus of Lancaster. The February, 1985 son of Premier Celebration went to Kent Willauer of Quakertown for $1,150.

Total dollar volume was $58,310 for the fifth annual sale.

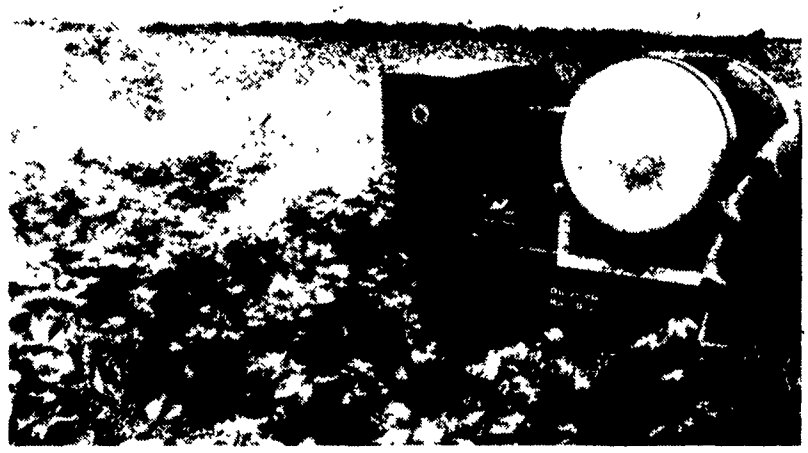
Automatic Micro-Mist Sprayer
Controls Droplet Size



The Automatic Micro-Mist Concentrate Sprayer can be powered by the tractor pto for use on rowcrops, vegetables and orchards.

The Automatic Micro-Mist Concentrate Sprayer is a faster, more efficient, economical alternative to conventional boom and aerial spraying of rowcrops, vegetables and orchards.

It takes mist blowing techniques a step further by giving the operator the ability to control the diameter of the spray droplets and choose the diameter best for each particular spraying application.

Controlling droplet diameter results in increased effectiveness and reduced materials cost.

The smaller droplets of the Micro-Mister coat all sides of the target evenly, due to the powerful turbulence produced by the unit. The Micro-Mister effectively coats the undersides of leaves, reaches inside trees, even coats the back sides of fruit.

The compact size and the utilization of chemical concentrates by the Micro-Mister offers many advantages. The unit comes in models that can be powered by PTO on small tractors, or a gasoline powered skid unit that slides into the bed of any pickup. Because the Micro-Mister eliminates the need for cumbersome water hauling equipment that requires additional manpower and time-consuming stops for refilling, the Automatic Micro-Mister saves both time and money.

The Automatic Micro-Mister can offer effective coverage up to 250 feet, depending on application, and can operate at speeds up to 12 m.p.h., with no dangerous overspray or drift.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Three Cheers for (Quality) Hay!

American agriculture has become the most effective agriculture in the world due to a number of reasons. One of these reasons has been the rather unique cooperation between the farmer, the researcher, and the commercial interests. For many years the catalyst bringing the three ingredients together has been the Cooperative Extension Service or as many farm families knew it, the "county agents."

My father was a "county agent" for well over 40 years in New Jersey. Those of you who are regular readers of this column know that I periodically quote him on management and marketing ideas. Actually this column did not start off as an ode to extension, so I will save that for a future column and get on with business.

Sometimes in the hurry to publish experimental reports from both the academic researcher or the commercial researcher, results are not as critically analyzed as they should be. I was pleased when someone else questioned the results in print from a study that showed no increase of somatic cell count from stress on a cow's udder (mishandling, overmilking and the like). The study results showed that the only thing that raised somatic cell counts was infection. From a practical point of view the dissenter said "what is the difference?" I would agree with his sentiments.

Hay Protein

A few days ago I was reading about an experiment done in Florida with dairy cows and alfalfa hay. The purpose of the experiment was a bit cloudy, but the conclusions were that alfalfa protein was not as good as soybean meal protein for milk production. Unfortunately the report on that particular experiment lacked a number of verifying facts, so should be taken with a grain of salt.

This is the case with a number of experiments that are reported in the so called "popular press". Too often these experiments are reported as news before all of the facts are really known. In the 30 years that I have been in extension in Pennsylvania, I have noted that the most profitable dairymen are invariably those who pay a lot of attention to producing top quality hay or haylage. That does not mean that good cow production records cannot be made with hay forage of lesser quality.

Time and time again people do make good production records even with rather low quality hay or haylage. Some of these herds even top the DHIA list, for whatever that is worth. What it does mean to me is that milk produced with medium or low quality hay and/or haylage costs more to produce than milk made with high quality forage. As milk prices take a downward trend in the next few years, cost of production will become more and more critical. Those who can produce milk for $8 per cwt will obviously remain profitable, while those who insist on producing milk for $14 will find it more and more difficult to stay in business without some type of subsidy. Even low interest loans, loan deferment, free money (unpaid bills), family loans, and off farm jobs may not be enough to stave off the inevitable for those who have no desire to reduce their cost of production.

The time to start reducing production costs is right now. Start out with producing the very best hay quality possible. Be ready to harvest when the alfalfa is in its best stage of growth, not when it is most convenient for you. Set priorities — you have a lot of things that need to be done in the spring and not enough time to do all of them. Hay or haylage making should have a top priority because (1) first cutting will usually represent half or more of your total hay crop; (2) how and when you take off the first cutting will have a major effect on the size and quality of the later cuttings; (3) alfalfa protein is one of the least expensive sources of protein you can feed right now; and (4) everything else that needs to be done on the farm will fall into place once hay harvest is completed.

I would strongly recommend that you make several "rainy day" lists of jobs that can be done when the weather does not cooperate with hay making. It would also be advisable to make as much of that first crop into haylage as possible. Why? Haylage requires less drying time and the spring often contains few periods of more than three days at a time of decent drying weather. Haylage can usually be completely harvested in less time than hay and the earlier the first cutting is taken off the field, the earlier the second cutting can get started. As "Kermit the Frog" would say on "Sesame Street" (ask your kids about this one) "Lets have three cheers for hay yayy, yayy, yayy!"

Steiger introduces 1000 Series tractors

FARGO, N. Dak. – Steiger Tractor, Incorporated, introduced a family of five new tractors at a product show in Fargo recently, under the theme "Four Wheel Drive Pride." Led by the 190-horsepower Puma 1000, the five tractors are based on a three-frame concept utilizing many common components for increased manufacturing efficiencies across the entire line.

Tractor efficiencies for the farmer have been increased as well, with standard features like a full 12-speed powershift transmission with electronic controller; quiet, easy access cabs; 51 square feet of tinted glass; pre-clean air systems with air conditioning; fully adjustable 12-position seats; on-board microprocessors that monitor critical functions and provide diagnosis on the dash display. The steering wheel tilts and telescopes to accommodate the operator.

The Puma 1000, at 190 HP, is the smallest of the new Steigers and is available with a steerable front axle option that permits the operator to make minor adjustments while working in row crops. Four-inch bar axles can be set from 60 to 130 inches. Several kinds of implements can be mounted on the front and a PTO is available as an option, as is a Category III 3-point hitch with position control and quick hitch.

The Bearcat 1000 comes with either a 235 HP Caterpillar or Cummins diesel engine and with 4-inch bar or outboard planetary axles. It has an adjustable air suspension seat, closed center load sensing hydraulics and easy access to major service points for all systems. Available options include PTO, Category III 3-point hitch, extra remote couplers and field light package.

Sharing the Bearcat frame, the Cougar 1000 features a choice between Caterpillar or Cummins 280 HP turbocharged diesel engines and a choice between outboard planetary or 4-inch bar axles. Cab entry is simplified by a rear-swinging door and close spacing between steps.

The air suspension seat adjusts for weight and back comfort. Options include PTO, 3-point hitch, two additional remote couplers, traction control packages and a field light package.

The Panther 1000 is powered by a 335 HP Cat or Cummins engine. It has a double reduction outboard planetary axles setup and a series of gauges to supplement the electronic dash display. An air suspension seat is fully adjustable. Options include a Category IV 3-point hitch with depth control, a 4th remote hydraulic coupler and numerous tire sizes.

The Lion 1000 shares the same frame with the Panther, but offers a choice between 375 HP Cat or Cummins engines. It is the most powerful of the 1000 Series tractors. With swing-out grill and tilt-up hood, service is simplified and the four-post cab permits an unobstructed view in all directions. An air suspension seat is standard, along with on-board microprocessor controls for the 12-speed transmission and electronic dash display. A Category IV 3-point hitch with depth control is available; so is a 4th remote hydraulic coupler.

Every 1000 Series Steiger tractor is a fulltime four-wheel-drive machine, manufactured in Fargo at the company's 420,000-square-foot plant. For more information about the 1000 Series, contact Steiger Tractor, Inc., P.O. 6006, 3101 First Avenue North, Fargo, North Dakota 58108. Phone (701) 293-4400.

New Patz spreader offers extra benefits

POUND, Wisc. – The Patz Model 8632 Tank Spreader features a massive walking-beam axle with spindles made of Fatigue-Proof® steel rated at 17,000 pounds each. Large tires provide flotation with ground pressure less than 20 pounds per square inch at 30,000 pounds gross weight. Bi-directional hydraulic brakes on all four wheels are standard equipment.

All working parts are serviced from outside the tank for maintenance and servicing ease.

The Model 8632 unloads from the rear in an adjustable, wide-spread pattern in as little as two minutes. A constant-velocity PTO shaft (540 or 1000 R.P.M.) virtually eliminates vibration ("chatter") when making turns under power.

The impeller is located at the front of the tanker to allow a short drive shaft and easy servicing. There are no bearings inside or under the tank. The impeller assembly has a packing-type seal to minimize leakage, and a three-inch plug allows draining the impeller assembly after use in freezing conditions.

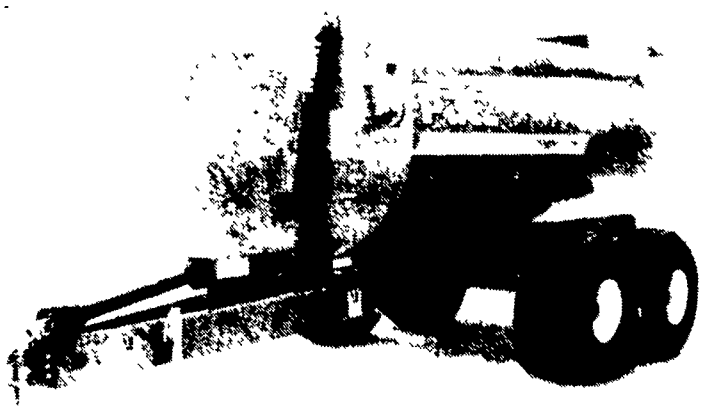
Double-welded seams on the tank provide extra strength and long life.

The deep-well fill opening minimizes manure splash. A standard-equipment manure level indicator allows convenient monitoring of liquid level when loading and unloading. Choice of front or rear location, or both with optional second indicator is available.

The handy clean-out cover is a convenience feature. Hitch can be adjusted to match tractor drawbar height.

The Patz Tank Spreader may also be ordered for truck mounting.

For more information, contact a Patz dealer or: Patz, Pound, Wisconsin 54161-0007. Phone (414) 897-2251.



Fatigue-proof spindles, hydraulic brakes, constant-velocity PTO shaft and double-welded tank seams are a few of the features on Patz's new tank spreader.

Zieglers attend Butler meeting

John Neill (left) vice president of Sales and Marketing for Butler Livestock Systems, welcomes Bart and Arlene Ziegler of Erb and Henry Equip., Inc., New Berlinville to a two-day Butler dealer meeting held recently in Alexandria, Va. The meeting gave Butler dealers from the United States and Canada an opportunity to hear about new products and programs for 1986. Based in Fort Atkinson, Wisc., Butler Livestock Systems manufactures a complete line of cattle feeding and manure handling equipment, as well as scale systems.

ATI Corp offers new PreSeeder

NEW HOLLAND – An improved PreSeeder, incorporating several new features for greater operating ease and convenience, has been introduced by ATI Corporation of New Holland, PA.

The new model features a smoother-running drive line, resulting from a repositioned gearbox, and an easier-to-read depth indicator. It also has a heavier slip clutch with an alarm to alert the operator to slippage, and a beef-up unitized frame for greater durability. Chain drive runs in oil bath resulting in longer life and less maintenance.

The PreSeeder, according to ATI, is gaining greater acceptance among landscapers and other lawn care professionals because it speeds up soil preparation as much as four-fold, compared to other mechanized methods. In addition to creating a fine-textured seedbed for better germination, it also levels out high and low spots and lines up stones and debris for easy removal.

The machine is easily adaptable to most tractors and requires only a 20 hp tractor for operation. For more information contact ATI Corp., 325 W. Main St., New Holland, Pa., 17557; phone 717-354-8721.

5-Acre Corn Club soil tests due May 1

UNIVERSITY PARK – Pennsylvania's Five Acre Corn Club gives farmers an opportunity to compete for corn growing awards and to compare results of their corn production efforts. Summaries of Corn Club yields provide information on the yield effects of inputs including soil types, fertility and pH levels, plant populations, fertilizer and tillage practices, weed control and crop rotations.

Farmers may enroll in the Five Acre Corn Club by completing an official entry form at their county extension office by July 1. Applicants must be at least 18 years old, and only one entry is allowed per farm and/or farm operator. The production field must be five acres or more, and a Pennsylvania State University soil test within the past two years is required. A current year soil test must be dated by May 1.

Participants may enroll in one of the following five class categories: Shelled Corn Harvest, Ear Corn Harvest, 3 Acre Harvest Sample (Shelled Grain), 3 Acre Harvest Sample (Ear Corn) and Irrigated Field (Ear or Shelled). Eligibility in one of the Three Year Average classes requires three consecutive years' participation in one of the harvest classes.

More information on the Five Acre Corn Club, including official rules and enrollment forms, is available from your county extension office.

New herbicide keeps farm ponds weed-free

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. – Farm ponds choked by weeds now can be cleaned up for better fishing, swimming and livestock use, and can be made more attractive with a new aquatic herbicide called Sonar, recently registered with the EPA. This new herbicide removes pondweed, coontail, waterlily, duckweed and many other water weeds without affecting water quality or wildlife.

Unlike previously available products, Sonar carries no label restrictions against fishing, swimming or drinking treated water, which allows this herbicide to be used without interrupting water use.

Sonar has no detrimental effects on fish, gamebirds, insects or other organisms such as plankton, and it is not harmful to nearby trees and shrubs that are not growing in the water. It can also be applied early when aquatic plants are small to control them throughout the season.

Sonar controls a wide range of submersed and emersed plants and shoreline grasses, but does not control algae.

Water chemistry and quality are not adversely affected by Sonar. There is no change in the dissolved oxygen content of the water, no sudden growth of algae and no unsightly effects on target weeds.

The effects of Sonar are long lasting, often keeping water clear for a year or two after a single application. This reduces costs, making Sonar comparatively economical. It can also be applied early when aquatic weeds are small to control them early in the season.

Sonar is manufactured by Elanco Products Company in both liquid and pelleted forms to fit any available application equipment. It is easy to apply with common spreaders sprayer or by hand.

DeKalb offers sorghum growing tips

YORK — Top grain sorghum yields are achieved through a combination of factors, says Clifton Parker, regional agronomist for DeKalb-Pfizer Genetics. "The first consideration is choosing the best hybrid for your needs — you should select hybrids based on how the grain will best supplement your operation," he explains.

"For example, yellow grain sorghum has higher nutritive value than bronze. If livestock feeding is part of your operation, then yellow hybrids are recommended. However, if you're marketing your grain, the highest producing, fullest season hybrids are the correct choice."

Good management practices also play a vital role in achieving top yields, Parker goes on to say. Seedbed preparation is the first step, and should provide good soil-to-seed contact. Seedbeds should be firm and free of large clods or trash that allow too much air space around seeds. And if no-tilling, equipment should be adjusted to again ensure good soil-to-seed contact.

Regarding actual planting, Parker advises waiting until soil temperatures are consistently 65 degrees Fahrenheit and rising. "Although bronze seed can be planted when soil is slightly cooler, yellows should be planted only at 65 degrees or above," he cautions.

Due to sorghum's small seed size, seed should be planted shallow, no more than 1 to 1½ inches deep. This shallow planting allows for rapid germination and emergence in warm, moist topsoil. Row width should be no greater than 30 inches, the agronomist adds, since sorghum is slow to develop a canopy over the rows.

"Sorghum grows best at soil pH of 6.5 to 7.5, so liming may be required to maximize utilization of applied fertilizer and other management practices," Parker continues. Soil test results and yield goals should determine fertility programs, he adds. In the absence of a soil test, general recommendations are: nitrogen 80-125 pounds per acre; phosphorus 40-70 pounds per acre; and potash 40-70 pounds. Micronutrients may be needed on some soils.

"Rapid stand establishment and fast seedling growth from starter fertilizer get sorghum off to a good start," Parker says. "Starter fertilizer should be applied below and to the side of the sorghum seed." The agronomist also notes that split applications of nitrogen are beneficial; half of the nitrogen should be applied as a side-dressing at the six-to-nine leaf stage, about 30 days after emergence, to increase the number of seeds set.

"Good management and the right hybrid are the keys to achieving top performance with grain sorghum," Parker concludes. "Following these guidelines should result in increased yields."

Farm Talk

By

Jerry Webb

Those farmers with the financial ability and the desire have returned to the fields to scatter their seeds and make one more try at that ever elusive farm profit. Plenty of farmers won't make the chase this year. They folded during the winter, unable to rally the energy or the finances for another try. And no doubt some of those who are back in the fields are simply digging their hole one year deeper. Obviously the last farm foreclosure hasn't been posted.

Reports from across the country reflect the mood and financial distress of farmers with indications of idled land something that was virtually unheard of a few years ago. Farmers are actually leaving fields vacant preferring to concentrate their efforts where there's potential for a reasonable return. After all why till a piece of land that promises only marginal productivity? Who needs the exercise and the equipment wear and tear to till a worn out old farm that isn't going to show a profit? Or why pay the cash rent beyond the ability of that land to pay it back? Some farms and some farm owners are going begging this spring according to some national reports. Here's an example: In Georgia the experts are saying there will be a 14 percent reduction in planted acres this year. The result of farmers scaling back or leaving farming altogether. Or in some cases, farmers just unable to find the money for seed, fuel, fertilizer and the other essentials of crop production.

It remains to be seen how many acres will be idled across the country voluntarily. After all it's highly unusual for farmers to back off from all out production. Even in cases where farmers have folded up or given up certain farms there has usually been another farmer waiting to step in and take his shot. But collectively or otherwise farmers have reached the breaking point. They're no longer willing to pay too much rent for a piece of ground that has lost money for every tenant for the last 3 or 4 years. They are unwilling or unable to take a chance on land that's too far from home or suffers excessively from prolonged dry spells. There just isn't any margin for risk taking left for many farmers.

You could applaud this effort and say it's good for agriculture to get some acres out of production at no cost to the taxpayer. But there is a cost although it's not as clear cut as a government payment. The cost in some areas like Georgia where a lot of land is being idled will show up in reduced purchasing by farmers for the things they need to till those acres. And in reduced sales from the production of those idled acres. That could mean significantly reduced farm spending, especially in hard hit areas.

Another impact will be on the incomes of those land owners who are unable to rent those marginal farms. In many cases retired folks counted on the income from those rented farms for their living. It was traditional some years ago for farmers not to have retirement programs. They considered their farms to be their retirement. When they got ready to retire they could rent the land and live off that income or in some cases sell off parcels as additional income was needed. It was like money in the bank maybe even better considering the inflationary times of the 1970's.

But suddenly hard times have come to farming and that rental income is reduced or even eliminated. That certainly has its effect on the quality of life of those retired owners and maybe even on the economic well being of the rural community where they live.

A substantial cutback in planted acres would have a very positive effect on farm prices and farmers' incomes. But that's not likely to happen. And that means farming harder and smarter than they did last year. If they gave up some land it was the poorest land or the land that cost the most in relation to its yield potential. That means they now can devote more effort, maybe even more resources to the remaining acres and that could mean higher yields. The net national effect might be even more output on a smaller base. A lot will depend on the weather between now and harvest.

We would like to personally thank Bill & Eleanor Gunser having sold their herd at our dairy barn April 3, 1986. They averaged $1,250. We would also like to thank our barn crew for the outstanding job of fitting the cattle. The many good comments on sale day about how well the cows were prepared supported our satisfaction.

Ask Your Purina Farm Consultant.

Q. What is a high density concentrate?

A. A concentrate which when mixed properly with grain yields the highest possible balance of all digestible nutrients.

Q. When do high density concentrates pay?

A. When ever a cow's genetic ability places her in a rapid weight loss condition during early lactation. This condition exists in many dairy herds due to the Dairy Industries continual genetic advancements.

Q. Is Purina Maxi-Tech 40 right for my herd?

A. Selecting the proper Purina concentrate depends on 1.) genetic ability of your cows. 2.) Types of forage & grain being fed. 3.) General management practices. For a herd analysis that would determine which Purina concentrate would be the most profitable in your herd, call your local Purina Farm Consultant or Purina Mills Inc. at 717-737-4581.

Q. Which salesman is most qualified to help produce the Maximum Return Over Feed Cost in my herd.

A. Question the salesman in the following areas.

1.) Research Support.
2.) Farm Consultant Training.
3.) Quality Control of Products.
4.) Product Flexibility.
5.) Can He Supply All Of Your Needs?

Ag projects funded in New York

ITHACA, NY – As part of an effort to bolster agriculture in New York, the state Department of Agriculture and Markets is funding nine new agricultural research projects at Cornell University.

The projects, ranging from a marketing study of New York tomatoes to the development of a machine that produces deviled eggs, will be conducted by researchers in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

All nine projects are supported by $262,000 in grants under the state's Agricultural Research and Development Program. The program was created by Governor Mario M. Cuomo in 1985 to fund research projects geared toward the development of production techniques and marketing methods that will enhance New York's multibillion-dollar food and agricultural industry.

The research projects were announced by Joseph R. Gerace, Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, at a news conference at Cornell.

He said, "The Agricultural Research and Development Program initiated by Governor Cuomo has come at a most opportune time. The challenges facing the food and agricultural industry in New York today are many and complex. This program and the innovative programs it supports at Cornell and throughout the state will play an important role in meeting these challenges."

The research projects being supported by the state funds are:

* New York has the potential of growing new field crops such as canola oil seed, hard red spring wheat, and lupine seed plants. Conducted by the Department of Agronomy and the Department of Plant Breeding and Biometry, this $50,000 project will test these crops in research fields in efforts to improve production techniques and marketing.

* Protecting apples against damage and deterioration in transportation and storage is the focus of a $42,250 study by the Department of Food Science. The study will examine new types of plastic wrapping material that has the potential of increasing the shelf life of apples.

* A $40,000 study by the Department of Agricultural Engineering will examine methods of applying treated poultry waste to agricultural fields while protecting surface water quality. The project also will focus on the effects of this application method on soil fertility and yield of crops grown in the soil fertilized by the poultry waste.

* In a $30,500 study, a team of researchers will develop new machinery and processing techniques for egg products. This study, conducted by the departments of agricultural engineering, poultry and avian sciences, and agricultural economics, will develop a system for producing ready-to-eat egg products such as deviled eggs.

* New York tomato growers supply only a fraction of the tomatoes consumed in New York, despite a potential to increase production. This $28,100 study by the Department of Vegetable Crops will identify marketing problems facing growers, evaluate current greenhouse and field-grown tomatoes for quality, storage, and shipping characteristics, and determine which harvest and storage practices would increase the market for tomatoes.

* The Department of Plant Pathology will study alternative planting systems for Long Island cauliflower, a specialty crop with a well-developed and expanding market. The $20,000 study also will examine two major factors limiting production: high labor costs and losses due to the black rot disease.

* The utilization of apple pomace, a by-product of apple juice processing, as cattle feed will be studied by the Department of Animal Science. This $18,554 project is designed to demonstrate the feasibility that apple pomace can be used as feed for dairy and beef cattle while reducing a serious waste disposal problem.

* One of the top three dairy states in the nation, New York has the potential to increase its cheese production. An $18,350 study will examine the feasibility of boosting New York's production of cheddar cheese and European-style specialty cheeses. To be conducted by the departments of agricultural economics and food science, the study also will compare New York's cheese manufacturing processes with those of major cheese producing regions in the United States.

* The Department of Plant Pathology will study how canker, a plant disease that strikes conifers, has significantly hampered New York's Christmas tree industry. This $16,500 study will determine the geographical range of the disease and develop a method of treating seedlings to combat the disease.

Delaware students win Farm Credit grants

NEWARK, DE – Juliet Marshall (Camden) and Edward S. Rolison Jr. (Townsend), both plant science majors at the University of Delaware, have won $500 Delaware Farm Credit scholarships for the current academic year.

Rolison is a junior specializing in ornamental horticulture and turf. He has been on the dean's list and has worked on the grounds crew at the university. His hobby, landscape design and installation, will become a full-fledged business this summer when he gets his contractor's license. Rolison, whose ultimate career goal is to own and operate a retail nursery and garden center, also received a $500 scholarship from the Delaware Association of Nurserymen.

Marshall, a senior studying agronomy, was last year's junior Farm Credit scholarship winner and received a renewal of this award. She is an honors student and president of the campus collegiate Future Farmers of America (FFA). As a teacher's assistant at the university, Marshall conducted a weekly lab for an introductory soil science course. She is considering agriculture-related extension or government work, or research as possible careers.

Since 1981 the Delaware Farm Credit Associations have awarded two scholarships annually to students majoring in some aspect of agriculture at the university. Awards are based on merit. Recipients must be full-time students and their parents or guardians must reside in Delaware.

Agrichemical group sponsors health conference

WASHINGTON — Recognizing and treating agrichemical related exposures will be the focus of a conference for health care providers, October 23-24, 1986, Hilton Palacio Del Rio, San Antonio, Texas.

The program is cosponsored by the National Agricultural Chemicals Association and Texas Tech University's Health Sciences Center, and is accredited by Texas Tech's Office of Continuing Medical Education and Continuing Nursing Education Program.

"It is important for health professionals to quickly diagnose patients who display symptoms consistent with exposure to agricultural chemicals," according to Dr. Jack D. Early, NACA President. "Accurate diagnosis is essential to proper treatment and, in cases of severe chemical related toxicity, proper treatment can be critical."

This one and a half-day conference will assist health care providers in distinguishing between chemical toxicity and other complaints with similar symptoms. It will feature national authorities in the areas of agrichemical toxicology, epidemiology, pharmacology and preventive medicine, in addition to an extensive list of federal and state experts involved in the regulation and use of agrichemicals.

Keynote panelists include:

- John E. Davies, M.D., M.P.H., M.R.C.P., Professor and Chairman, Department of Epidemiology and Public Health, University of Miami, School of Medicine
- Wayne R. Snodgrass, M.D., Ph.D., Associate Professor, Departments of Pediatrics and Pharmacology-Toxicology, University of Texas Medical Branch, Medical Director, Texas Poison Center
- Donald P. Morgan, M.D., Ph.D., Professor, Department of Preventive Medicine and Environmental Health, University of Iowa, College of Medicine
- John Doull, M.D., Ph.D., Professor of Pharmacology and Toxicology, Department of Pharmacology, Toxicology and Therapeutics, University of Kansas Medical Center
- William G. Troutman, Pharm. D., Director, New Mexico Poison and Drug Information Center, University of New Mexico
- Virgil H. Freed, Ph.D., Professor Emeritus, Department of Agricultural Chemistry, Oregon State University

Topics will include:

- Recognition and treatment of acute and chronic agrichemical exposures
- Basic toxicology of agrichemicals — short and long-term effects
- Laboratory procedures for confirming exposure to agrichemicals
- Agrichemical and farm labor use patterns in various regions of the United States
- Minimizing exposure to agrichemicals through protective clothing and equipment and other proper work practices
- Federal and state regulations governing agrichemical use
- Information resources, epidemiological data bases, and health care technologies available in diagnosing and treating agrichemical related exposures

The conference is free to physicians, nurses, outreach workers, aides, administrative staff — all who work in a migrant health center, community health clinic or other health facility.

Physicians and nurses attending the conference will be awarded continuing education credits through Texas Tech University's Health Sciences Center.

The health conference is part of NACA's ongoing effort to promote a safe work environment for farm workers through education. The program uses public service announcements and an illustrated brochure, both available in Spanish and English, to convey easy-to-understand safety tips for those working in areas treated with farm chemicals. To date, nearly 500,000 copies of the popular brochure have been distributed to farm workers.

For more information on the Texas health conference or on the farm worker education program, contact Communications Department, NACA, 1155 15th Street, NW, 9th Floor, Washington, D.C. 20005, 202-296-1585.

DEALER INQUIRIES INVITED

Brazil has soybean potential, U.S. farmers find

ST. LOUIS, MO – It was coffee shop talk. The young farmer said his soybean crop looked good. He and his wife just built a house on their 300-acre farm, and he expects to pay it off this year. Fred Dirks feels pretty good about his future.

Dirks farms in Brazil. The twenty-five-year-old farmer grew up on a soybean and corn farm in Rio Verde, where he continues to work with his father as he builds his own farming operation.

Dirks is one of a community of progressive Mennonite farmers who produce corn and soybeans on farms northeast of Rio Verde, a town of 120,000 that just 10 years ago was a dusty outpost of 30,000 inhabitants. Today the city supports a thriving agricultural industry that includes a soybean processing plant, grain traders and farm cooperatives that furnish supplies and purchase the abundant crops of soybeans and corn.

A chance meeting with Dirks in a restaurant in Goiania, capital of the province of Goias, was one of many experiences of 16 U.S. soybean farmers who recently returned from a soybean study mission to Brazil and Argentina sponsored by the American Soybean Association. The tour, paid for by the participants, was aimed at helping U.S. soybean farmers learn more about soybean production in South America.

"I wanted to see if all the stories I've heard about Brazilian and Argentine soybean production were true," says Sumner, Iowa, corn and soybean farmer David O'Brien. "And now that I've been there, I'm convinced that if these people can overcome political and economic problems, they will be an even greater force to reckon within the future. There's certainly plenty of opportunity for expansion."

The 14-day tour took farmers into three major soybean producing areas: the west central and southern areas of Brazil and Argentina's Pampas region, a flat and fertile area that extends east and south of Buenos Aires.

"Brazil is a land with tremendous potential," says Jack Nagel of Davey, Neb. "They're using only about 30 million acres for crop production right now. Nearly 400 million more acres of productive land could easily be cleared and brought into production."

Southern Illinois University agronomist Jim Tweedy, also a participant in the study mission, notes that South American farmers have some cost advantages.

"For one thing they use smaller, less complex equipment," says Tweedy. "They can use smaller equipment because they don't have the time constraints of weather that U.S. farmers have in the spring and fall. Farmers in both Brazil and Argentina typically have several weeks of good weather to plant and harvest."

Seed corn producer Rick Querna, of Danville, Iowa, says he expected to see farmers working with outdated technology and old equipment.

"That wasn't the case," he says. "Farmers in both Brazil and Argentina are very progressive. And we didn't see nearly the erosion problems I had expected — perhaps because it has been so dry this year."

Despite advantages of readily available, inexpensive land, low labor and equipment costs, farmers in Brazil and Argentina have one big disadvantage — high transportation costs. Both countries lack developed rail and water transport systems. Nearly everything moves by truck.

"That's an expensive way to transport grain," says retired grain elevator operator and farmer Oliver Berry of St. Joseph, La., "especially when a high percentage of their production comes from the western side of the country. They're transporting soybeans as far as 400 miles over hilly two-lane highways. They told us transportation costs run as high as $1 per bushel."

What are the implications of soybean production growth in Brazil and Argentina for U.S. farmers? Jack Nagel agrees with other farmers that cutting costs and working to maximize yields is the approach U.S. farmers must adopt. But he's not sure how he'll cut costs to levels that match South American costs.

"I've done a lot already to cut costs," he says. "But I don't think I've reached a cost level that will keep me competitive with the farmers down there. I think we can do it, but it is going to take some hard work and creative effort on the part of all U.S. farmers."

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT

Pull Through The Tough Spots With A Power Front Axle.

When wet spots or other tough areas slow you down, a quick shift into four wheel drive can make all the difference. And all it takes is a Power Front Axle option on your 2-70, 2-110, 2-135, 2-155 or 2-180 Field Boss® tractor.

4WD is not created equal. If you think all Power Front Axles are the same, look again. Most tractors use the engine as part of the structural frame. Adding four wheel drive puts a lot of stress on the engine block. We think too much stress.

It's one reason why every Field Boss has a separate main frame casting. The engine is cradled inside it. Besides adding hundreds of pounds in working weight to the tractor, this separate main frame handles the extra stress of the four-wheel-drive.

See what over 21 years of success in four wheel drive tractors can mean. Drop into the dealership for a look at a Field Boss with Power Front Axle. Today.

Cornell scientists honored

ITHACA, NY — Three Cornell University scientists have been elected Fellows of the Crop Science Society of America (CSSA).

They are William D. Pardee, professor of plant breeding; Royse R. Murphy, professor emeritus of plant breeding; and Neal F. Jensen, the Liberty Hyde Bailey Professor of plant breeding, emeritus, all in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell. They were honored at the CSSA's annual meeting in Chicago for their professional accomplishments in the field of crop science and for their services to the national organization.

Pardee, chairman of Cornell's Department of Plant Breeding and Biometry, is a specialist in field crops and is recognized as an authority on production and usage of field crop seeds. A member of the Cornell faculty since 1966, Pardee was a faculty member at the University of Illinois for five years before he joined Cornell.

Murphy is the developer of several superior varieties of alfalfa and other forage crops; his varieties have greatly benefited agriculture in the Northeast. Alfalfa varieties developed under his leadership are Mohawk (1985), Honeoye (1974), Saranac-AR (1974), Oneida (1960), Iroquois (1967), Saranac (1965), Mark II (1965), and Cayuga (1960). In addition, he developed the smooth bromegrass variety Saratoga in 1958. He was president of CSSA in 1961-1962, and served as Dean of the Faculty at Cornell from 1964 to 1967 and as head of the Department of Plant Breeding and Biometry from 1953 to 1964.

Jensen is recognized internationally as one of the leading plant geneticists and a pioneer in the methodology of plant breeding. He has developed 20 new varieties of wheat, oats, and barley, which have helped New York and other states in the Northeast boost their grain productivity over the past four decades. His honors include the 1977 DeKalb Crop Science Distinguished Career Award from the CSSA.

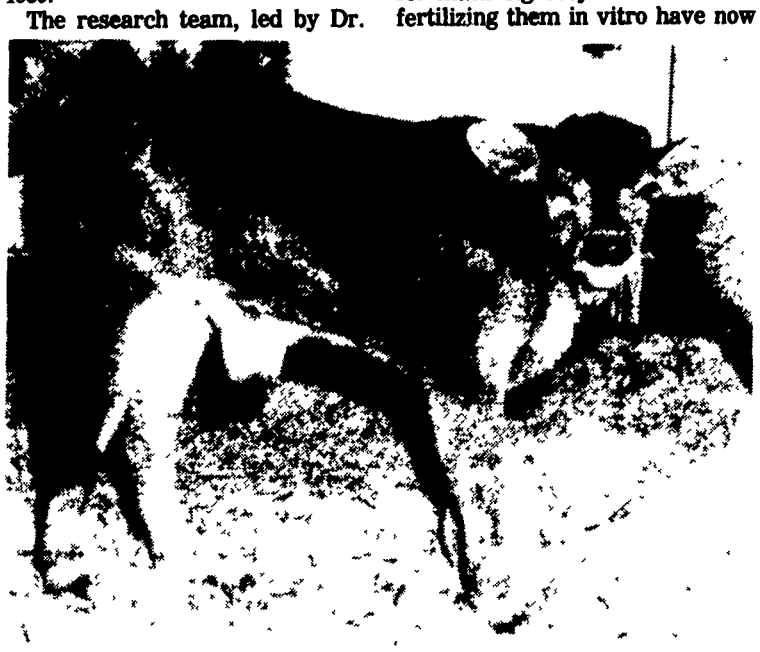
Test-tube calf born at ABS lab

DEFOREST, WI – A bull calf, believed to be unique in the world, has resulted from a series of painstaking steps by scientists at the University of Wisonsin-Madison. He was born at the ABS research facility, February 26, 1986.

The research team, led by Dr. Neal First, removed an immature egg from the ovary of a crossbred cow, nurtured it in a culture dish (in vitro) until maturity and fertilized it with frozen semen from an ABS bull.

These newly developed methods for maturing oocytes in vitro and fertilizing them in vitro have now progressed to a highly efficient level as reported by Dr. First and colleagues at the 1986 meeting of the International Embryo Transfer Society.



The result of in vitro fertilization, this calf born at ABS, represents a major step towards cloning cattle.

After fertilization the resulting embryo was then cultured for 24 hours in vitro before being placed, by surgical means, in the oviduct of a sheep. After five days the developing embryo was non-surgically transferred to the uterus of a recipient Holstein cow.

Mother nature then took over. Following another 282 days of gestation, a healthy, vigorous dun colored calf, appropriately named Falcon after the manufacturer of the culture dish, entered the world oblivious to the fact that he had made bovine history.

Falcon's birth marks the second successful step in a joint ABS/University of Wisconsin research program funded by W. R. Grace & Co., parent company of ABs. During the inital phase of the project, the University, in association with ABS research staff, produced several pairs of identical twin calves by using micro-surgery to divide embryos collected from some of the Holstein breed's top cows contracted by ABS.

Said Dr. Robert Walton, President of American Breeders Service, "Although in vitro fertilization is of little or no practical value to cattle breeders at the present time, these scientists view their latest success as a very important step towards the development of a cloning technique that can eventually be used to maximize the influence of genetically superior breeding stock."

Bedell bill ups ethanol usage

WASHINGTON – U.S. Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, introduced legislation to require increasing amounts of ethanol in gasoline. Cosponsoring the bill are Reps. Richard Stallings of Idaho, Tom Daschle of South Dakota and Tim Penny of Minnesota.

The legislation would require in 1987 that the aggregate of all gasoline and gasoline-blended fuels contain at least 2 percent alcohol. That would mean at least 2 billion gallons of alcohol would be consumed in that year. Ethanol is made primarily from corn and has been regarded by many as a potentially large market for grain if demand can be increased and production costs reduced.

"This legislation is important because we can't get out of the surplus problems in agriculture by cutting supply alone," Bedell said. "We must find additional markets and new uses for our grain. Ethanol blended with gasoline is one of those markets. As lead as a fuel additive is phased out, ethanol becomes a natural replacement."

The amount of alcohol required would increase, to 5 percent in 1995 and to 10 percent in the year 2000. Meanwhile, the Secretary of Energy would be required to set proportionately higher levels of alcohol to help achieve the targets.

"This is another part of our fight to improve the agricultural economy," Bedell said. "Farmers want their income from the market. To help make that possible, we need to encourage more uses for corn, to boost demand and use up the surplus."

Bedell has been a major promoter of alcohol fuels in Congress. He is a founder of the Alcohol Fuels Caucus and has led the fight for tax credits and other incentives to encourage the production of ethanol.

Dr. Morgan earns research grant

Dr. Robin Morgan in her laboratory.

NEWARK, DE – Dr. Robin Morgan, molecular biologist at the University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station, has received a grant from the University of Delaware Research Foundation. She will attempt to clone the genomes of two serotypes of Marek's Disease virus. The disease causes annual losses of millions of dollars among commercial broiler operations on the Delmarva peninsula.

Morgan will use recombinant DNA techniques to identify key genes and gene products of the virus strains. Such clones should supply tools for constructing recombinant vaccine strains for use in the control of Marek's Disease– the ultimate goal of this research.

Morgan, an assistant professor in the department of animal science and agricultural biochemistry, already has a university/industry partnership grant in support of her efforts to develop a genetically engineered Marek's Disease vaccine. She says genetically engineered vaccines, as opposed to other types, can be constructed to contain specific genes of interest to researchers.

Only the Quadra-Disk planter gives you "Total Soil Flow Control."

Planting accuracy—regardless of soil conditions—is what sets the new Deutz-Allis Quadra-Disk planter apart from all others.

Opening disks. Big 16" staggered narrow cut opening disks form the seed drop trench.

Exclusive walking beam gauge wheel system. Gauge wheels, integral with the closing disks, provide positive depth control in the seed drop zone.

Spoil-Cap firming wheel. Lightly "caps" warm, moist soil over the seed trench, assuring optimum conditions for germination.

The Quadra-Disk planter introduces many other outstanding features. Like its sturdy 7" x 7" box beam frame. And the Whopper Hopper—with largest per-row capacity in the industry. And much more.

Kevin Jacobson

Kevin will be managing established sales territory and continue to concentrate on new customers in this area. Prior to this, from May 1980 to May 1982 he was a herdsman on a 100 cow dairy farm near Chetek, Wisconsin. After he completed an Associate Degree in Agri-Business from the Willmar Vocational Technical Institute in 1976, Kevin worked on the home farm from 1977 through 1980.

Kevin's experience and ability will enable him to coordinate and organize an effective sales approach in Southeastern Minnesota. His A.I. background and sales experience will enhance his new job with Sire Power, Inc. He enjoys working with farmers and the dairy industry, and looks forward to working in this area.

Kevin and his wife, Joyce, have two children and will continue to reside in Wanamingo, Minnesota.

Hardy Appointed at Cornell

ITHACA, NY – Ralph W. F. Hardy, one of the nation's leading scientists in the field of life sciences and an authority on biotechnology, has been named president and chief executive officer of the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research at Cornell University.

Hardy will assume his new duties Sept. 1, 1986, succeeding Roy A. Young, who has served as managing director of BTI since 1980. Young and his wife plan to return to Oregon, where he was associated with Oregon State University for many years.

Hardy is the fifth chief executive officer of the research institute. Established in 1924 in Yonkers, NY, the institute moved to Cornell campus in 1978. Recognized worldwide as a leading research organization of its kind, BTI is dedicated to the improvement of food and fiber production and to the maintenance of environmental quality. BTI concentrates its research efforts entirely on plants, focusing on four primary program areas – biological control, environmental biology, nitrogen and crop yields, and plant stress.

Christian C. Hohenlohe, chairman of the BTI Board of Directors, said: "The directors are extremely pleased that Ralph Hardy agreed to join the Boyce Thompson Institute as president. He brings a wealth of rich experience to his new post. He is a proven administrator and a highly successful business executive; he also has the academic credentials and professional interest to effectively guide the plant research activities on which the institute has developed its international reputation."

Hohenlohe also announced the change in title from managing director to president. He explained, "The directors felt that since the institute is a private, independent, not-for-profit corporation, assigning the title of president to the chief executive officer would certainly be in keeping with recognized business practices. Further, the title of president more accurately reflects the broad scope and heavy responsibility of managing this major research enterprise, which employs a staff of 130 and operates with an annual budget of almost $8 million."

Waverly prepares for Seventh Annual Jersey Sale

By GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Staff Correspondent

CLEARBROOK, VA — Mention the name Waverly Farm to anyone with even a remote interest in Jerseys and you will strike a chord of recognition. Known as the Robert Stiles Family, the 210 cow herd is owned and managed by four brothers, Ken, Paul, Mike, and Tracy Stiles and has gained national recognition in both the showring and the milk pail.

A quick look at the summary of their herd makes even the seasoned dairy cattle breeder envious. At Waverly Farm 27 cows have records over 20,000 pounds of milk and 18 of these cows are scored Excellent. Also 38 cows have top records over 19,000 pounds of milk or 900 pounds of fat. Another 55 cows have dams or grandams with records over 20,000 pounds of milk.

The December R.H.A. on 200 cows was 13,532 M 4.7 percent 633 F and 506 P. There are 60 cows at Waverly scored Excellent and the appraisal average on 188 cows is 85.7 percent.

Waverly Farm is currently the only Jersey farm housing two National Grand Champions; Sybil Surville Jesse EX-96 was the National Grand Champion in 1976 and 1977 as well as the National Reserve Grand Champion 1978 and 1979, and her great-granddaughter W. F. Justin Lanita EX-94 National Grand Champion 1983, 1985.

With all the apparent pressure of handling such a top herd like theirs, it would seem there would be little time for more ambitious endeavors. But, like most successful people in other fields, the Stiles never miss an opportunity to move forward.

This drive for improvement, promotion, and the desire to work with the best cattle of the breed prompted them to begin the Waverly Invitational Sale series seven years ago. They have also begun housing of the Heifer Project International Herd in the past 18 months.

The Seventh Waverly Invitational Sale takes place on April 21. The sale, held annually at the Frederick County Fairgrounds, Clearbrook, VA, has offered the best of the breed in a sale series who's average has been eclipse only by sales the likes of the All-American Jersey Sale in Louisville, Ky.

Tracy Stiles confirms that the motivation to begin the sales was two-fold. First, they had gone to lots of sales themselves and felt they had the know-how to put together a quality sale. Secondly, it would afford them the opportunity to merchandise a select few of their own cattle. He acknowledges that the sale gives the farm a showcase for publicity.

This publicity has had many pluses for both the Stiles and the consignors to their sales. Many guests visit Waverly Farm while in the area for the sale. In preparation, the entire herd is clipped, feet are trimmed, and spring fix-up is all completed by sale time. Consignors benefit from the sale's proven track record for success.

Tracy stresses that their sale tries to have something for everyone. From previous sales, there have been more than thirty head that developed into Bull Mothers, contract cows, or made Hall of Fame records for their new owners. Because of their success, consignments are also easier to get.

Tracy recalls in the early days, they had to go looking for consignors. Now consignors are coming to them. They still try to see every consignment before accepting it, with selections starting around Christmas.

Another added plus for consignors is the rate of commission charged for the sale. Since the Stiles view this sale as in part a promotion for Waverly Farm, they feel they should charge only enough commission to cover the sale's expenses. Therefore, the commission for each sale has been set after the sale, when all the expenses are totaled.

Concerning the type of cow accepted for the sale, Tracy states, "There's no written criteria for selection. We're looking for a good cow and a cow that will sell well." Mike added, "We feel that part of our success here (at Waverly Farm) is that we've never been afraid to buy a good cow; one that is pleasing to look at, but still profitable to milk. With the dairy economics the way they are today, we feel we need to have this kind. This is the kind we aim to sell in our sales."

Another marketing factor that enters into the Waverly Sale this year and has appeared in several sales in the last 18 months are consignments from the Jersey herd owned by Heifer Project International (HPI). The herd is housed and managed by Waverly Farm.

HPI is a non-profit church related organization based in Perryville, Ark. HPI works with all species of livestock and dairy cattle placing donated animals with needy individuals and communities. HPI has animals placed in all 50 states and in 70 foreign countries.

Eighteen months ago a PA investor Mr. Robert Marsh donated his 75 head Jersey herd to HPI. In that herd are such noted Jersey matriarchs as Forest Glen Quicksilver Dawn, A-Nine Majestic Morgan, W.F. Quicksilver Ashley, Forest Glen Westerner Lillian, and Maple Row Generator Sherry. There are offspring of Rocky Hill Favorite Deb, the former National Milk Champion, Quicksilvers Claire of Ogston, and Gramhill Q.S. Fran Fair. When seeking a home for such a quality group, HPI asked Waverly Farm to take them in.

The Stiles agreed and moved the 75 head into their own facilities with some moderate expansion in buildings. The HPI herd is fully integrated with the Waverly herd and the Stiles have complete management control. The two herds are tested on separate DHIA reports. Each month HPI receives a copy of their herd's test sheets, breedings, sales, and contracts. The Stiles receive all the milk from the cows, a boarding fee for the young stock, and a percentage of all sales.

The arrangement has mutual benefits for both parties. Waverly has handled HPI's consignments at several elite sales, the proceeds going to fund HPI projects. Waverly Farm does the contract negotiations for bull calves going to A.I., HPI again receiving the funds. Bull calves that are not sold for A.I. purposes are placed in HPI projects. Presently six baby bull calves are being prepared for export to Bolivia. Recently, embryos from HPI cattle were exported to India.

Tracy agrees that it has been successful financially for the farm but stressed, "We really like getting the opportunity to work with animals of this caliber. We hope this arrangement is a long term thing." HPI has a heifer consigned to this year's Waverly Invitational Sale.

When asked about the outlook for this year's sale, Tracy predicted, "Regardless for the present dairy

FIRST CHOICE FOR CONSERVATION TILLAGE.

Today's tillage practices bring a whole new set of problems to farmers concerned with keeping their corn clean.

Which is why more conservation tillage farmers are switching to Bicep® for cleaner fields. With no broadleaf weeds. And no grasses.

Bicep is a single formulation herbicide that provides season-long control of broadleaf weeds and grasses because of its unique combination of chemical properties.

Low volatility—there is very little evaporation off the trash.

Good solubility—a little moisture carries Bicep into the weed and grass germinating zone.

Excellent Adsorption—once in the weed germinating zone, Bicep adheres to soil particles, providing season-long control.

In many cases Bicep is less expensive than tank mixes, with better results. One application is all you need for clean fields all season long. With no tank mixing. No hassle. And best of all, no weeds or grasses.

Bicep. Make it your first choice for cleaner fields in conservation tillage. CIBA–GEIGY situation, I think we'll have a good sale. There have been a lot of early calls. Our high sale average was in 1982 when we were over $3200. Our low average was two years ago when it was $1900. These seem to swing with the price of milk and the availability of feed. I think the good cows will still sell well."

In regards to the outlook for Waverly Farm, Ken concluded, "We all get along here together because we all like the same kind of cows. These cows must be adaptable in a commercial basis. I like to see a cow make 15,000 by the time she's a 4 Yr. Old. She really should make that on her second calf. We also like to have cows that say in the herd. We always have 15 or more cows in the herd with over 100,000 pounds lifetime. This shows that we believe in taking good care of our cows."

NEWARK, DE — Spring on the farm. Does the idea stir thoughts of bird song, cows lowing in the barn, fields of grain waving under a brilliant sky, perhaps the aroma of fresh-baked bread wafting through an open kitchen window?

If you're a farmer, springtime can also mean working late into the night to prepare equipment for planting, rushing to get a crop in before another rain makes the ground too wet to work, watching a week of wind wipe our a newly emerging cash crop. Experiences like these build up irritation and fatigue — stress you dare not show when you talk to the banker.

Engineers use the word "stress" to refer to the strain a structure must withstand. Depending on how it's built, a structure has a measurable resistance to strain. If overload occurs, it will distort and break.

"For people, stress is more complex," says University of Delaware extension family specialist Dr. Patricia Tanner Nelson. "When you go into high gear to get a job done as fast as possible before the weather changes, you experience stress. You feel the effects of powerful hormones being released in your body. Your blood pressure rises, your heart rate quickens, breathing and blood flow accelerate."

It's OK to function this way during an occasional emergency, Nelson says. But problems arise when you're under heavy strain too long, or when too many stressful events occur at once. Like a boiler that bursts under pressure, your body breaks down and your health, your decision-making capacity and your relationships suffer.

What are the clues that you or family members are under too much stress? The symptoms can be physical, mental, emotional or social. They include irritability, insomnia, upset stomach, lowered sex drive, mood swings, heavy smoking or drinking, inability to relax, constant fatigue, feeling everyone is against you.

"The first step in stress management is to learn to recognize your body's stress symptoms," Nelson says. "These signals are like the little red warning lights in your car or truck that blink when something is wrong. They're telling you that unless you make some changes — maybe even alter your lifestyle — major troubles lie ahead."

Most people cope well with stress most of the time, the family specialist says. Life is full of challenges — little ones as well as big ones. The trick is to develop positive ways to deal with pressure — strategies you can draw on to get through stressful times.

Farmers who are successful stress managers seem to share certain characteristics, Nelson says. They're self aware. They use a variety of techniques to relax. They have many interests. They're active and productive. They use and give support. They spend time with their families on a regular basis. They accept responsibility for their own stress levels and respect the stress limits of others. And they think positive.

For more information on how to recognize and manage the stressors affecting you and your family, call the county extension office in Newark (451-2506), Dover (736-1448) or Georgetown (856-7303). Ask for the fact sheet, "Stress on the Farm." This information is also available as part of a special newsletter Nelson has written, Strategies for Farm Families in Tough Times.

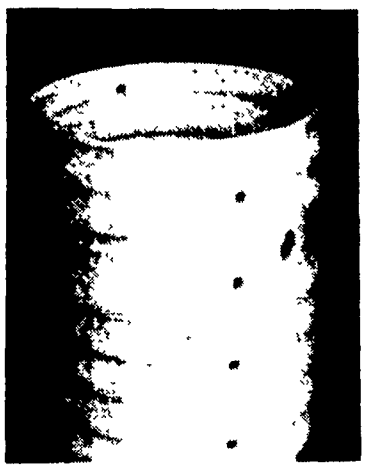
Hancor's 'Bio-Flow' tubing resists clogging

LEINDLAY, Ohio – Hancor announces a major advance in farm drainage for land prone to develop iron ochre or red sludge. This iron forming bacteria can render a drainage system useless in as little as six months by clogging the drain perforations.



BIO-FLOW tubing

After two years of extensive field and laboratory testing, Hancor claims to have the only proven product to combat the problem – BIO-FLOW (TM) tubing made with a unique compound that contains a bacteria-inhibiting agent.

Hancor's new BIO-FLOW tubing compound is EPA approved, non-toxic and environmentally safe. Independent laboratory tests show no detectable levels of bacteria-inhibiting agent observed in either soil or water exposed for months to the product under actual field drainage conditions. It is available from Hancor in 4-, 5-, 6- and 8-inch diameters and is bright orange in color.

For further information, contact your local distributor, or write to Hancor, Inc., P.O. Box 1047, Findlay, Ohio 45839.

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range A good pasture with a pH of 6 5 or higher, for example, will make 300 to 400 lbs of beef per acre and produce up to $100 gross income per acre This means with the help of lime, profits from pastures can compare favorably with feed or grain crops

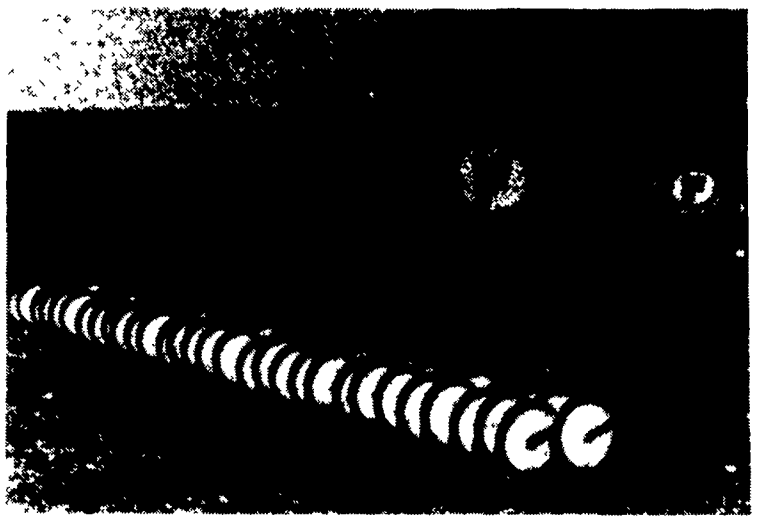
Andy Anderson, marketing manager of Tye, says that because ICM combines the latest technology in intelligent management practices, new seed varieties, fertility and chemical programs, water management and precision seeding equipment, "Intelligent" Cereal Management is a better name for the new system.



The Tye Company introduces the new Series Five family of Ultranarrow 4" row "Intelligent" Cereal Management (ICM) Grain Drills for Spring 1986 delivery.

For some time Tye has been working with the leading ICM growers in the USA and Canada to develop a new drill system that meets their specifications. From this research, Tye has developed the Series Five family that features precision, Ultranarrow 4" row ICM planting.

The Tye Grain Drills are new from the ground up. Tye engineers started by developing a new internal, 9-flute seeder with a simple, reliable rate adjustment to gently and accurately meter seed. Next they incorporated a heavy duty row unit to accommodate Ultranarrow 4" ICM row spacings. The row unit is made of narrow vee double disc openers, quick change double-sealed bearings, individual press wheels, and a long 8" stagger between rows.

Farmers have a choice of 2 x 13 or 1 x 12 press wheels with simple, accurate depth control adjustment. Row units are bolted to a heavy duty 7 x 7 tubular main frame. Tye ICM drills also feature a simple drive system and a 2.0 bu/ft box with easy clean-out. The whole system is built for long life and low customer maintenance.

Models with 4" rows are available in 10', 14', 15' and 20' sizes to match ICM farming needs. Designed for use in prepared seedbeds, Tye ICM Grain Drills accomodate low bedrows or flat planting field practices.

Initial 1986 production will be alloacted to select ICM operations in North America only. For additional information, product specifications, and availability information call or write Andy Anderson, The Tye Company, Box 218, Lockney, Texas 79241, telephone (806) 652-3367 or TLX 880071.

Corn Growers back U.S. ethanol plan

ST. LOUIS – The Board of Directors of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) voted for a unanimous reaffirmation of its support for the nation's fuel ethanol program at its recent Board meeting in Washington, D.C.

"In noting the welcome relief and favorable economic forecasts resulting from declining crude oil, gasoline and heating oil prices, NCGA Directors from 17 states expressed concern that the current energy market decline may encourage policy complacency with regard to long-term energy supply and security," says Dain Friend, NCGA president from Warrensburg, Illinois.

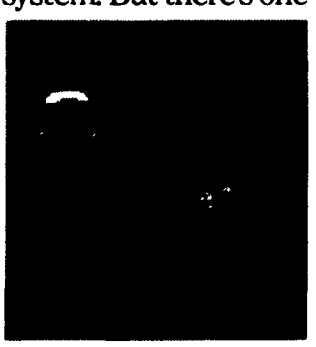
"The reality of fossil fuel depletion was starkly demonstrated with gasoline shortages twice in the last dozen years. The U.S. is even more vulnerable today in that we consume 25% of the world's oil production but the U.S. holds only 4% of the proven oil reserves.

"Against this backdrop, the U.S. fuel ethanol industry supplied 7% of all motor fuels utilized in 1985. This volume of fuel was produced in the U.S. utilizing 240 million bushels of U.S. corn as the feedstock, representing a 40% volume increase over 1984. This resulted in a savings of approximately 8 million barrels of crude oil imports valued at approximately $200 million.

"In light of this performance, the NCGA recognizes the increasing value and importance of continued fuel ethanol production increases for the benefit of U.S. consumers, the general economy and U.S. agriculture," says Friend.

THE VICON SYSTEM. MAKE IT WORK FOR YOU.

Sometimes it seems we spend half our lives fighting the system. But there's one system that's always on your side—the Vicon Haying System.



With a Vicon KM Mower/Conditioner, one of our high capacity V-Rakes, and a new Vicon round baler, you can make hay faster, better and more economically.

The KM 321, for instance, is the fastest mower/conditioner in the world. It's 30 percent faster than conventional mower/conditioners. A new drive unit lets you operate non-stop. Take square corners without drive line vibration or danger of failure.

And even if you have a heavy, dew-wet crop, the KM 321 won't plug, and won't leave you worrying about leaf loss.

If you're making big round bales, the next step is a Vicon V-Rake. Eight- or ten-wheel models provide a working width of up to 22 ft. Rake quickly and cleanly on the first pass. Pick up more hay with less dirt and trash. And the fingerwheels are ground driven to eliminate wearing parts. No gears. No belts. No PTO shafts.

Finally, try one of Vicon's new round balers. The easiest starting round balers in the world. They give you a tighter, heavier, more consistent bale. Time after time. The secret is Vicon's revolutionary design combining a full-width floating pick-up with a wide-open throat. The result—more bales per hour and lower operating costs. For more information on Vicon Haying Systems, or the name of your closest Vicon dealer, just call or write. We think you'll see that when you can't beat the system, there's only one thing left to do.

Join it.

Racal offers protection from dust, spores

FREDERICK, Md. – Racal Airstream now has available for agricultural use the AGH1 Airstream Helmet. The AGH1 system gives the wearer protection against dusts, spores and molds while delivering a continuous stream of cool, clean air.

The AGH1 also provides head, eye and face protection with a comfortable, lightweight helmet and faceshield. The design of the helmet allows for normal conversation, accommodates eyeglasses and can be worn by workers with beards.

Airstream helmet

The system is powered by a rechargeable nickel cadmium battery pack which lasts for eight hours per charge, and approximately two years continuous use. The air is drawn through a pre-filter by a motor and then passes through a main filter and down over the user's facial area. There is also available a vehicle adapter for operating the system off of a 12 volt battery.

Racal Airstream also offers similar systems for protection against spraying or mixing herbicides or pesticides.

The local agricultural distributor for Airstream products is Schick Farms, R.D. 2, Box 219, Kutztown, PA 19530. The phone number is 215-285-6519.

Pioneer revamps seed operation

DES MOINES, IA – Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. has announced a reorganization of its seed production and marketing operations in North America.

Nearly all of the changes are above the district sales manager and seed production plant levels, according to President and Chairman Tom Urban. The company will continue to rely on sales representatives and dealers as in the past to service its customers, according to Urban.

In the long run, Urban says, the changes should result in products that fit customers' needs even closer than today, more personal service from the company's field staff and more dependable supplies of seed that provide even better value than at present.

Replacing the five U.S. production-and-marketing divisions and its Canadian subsidiary will be a single new division called North American Seeds. There will be one production unit headquartered at Johnston, Iowa to manage the 40 seed production plants that produce Pioneer (R) brand corn, sorghum, soybean, wheat and alfalfa seeds.

The marketing of Pioneer seeds and silage inoculant to farmers will be directed by two units, Marketing West officed at Johnston, Iowa and Marketing East at Tipton, Indiana. To assure that local needs and conditions are met, the company is dividing North America into 15 areas. Each will be headed by a Manager of Sales directing the work of District Sales Managers and Agronomists.

"By putting more people close to our customers and involving them directly in deciding how we can best work with farmers, we believe we can ensure the continued success of Pioneer," Urban said. "Farmers are making major changes in the way they do things and we feel that we need to get closer to them to keep up with their needs."

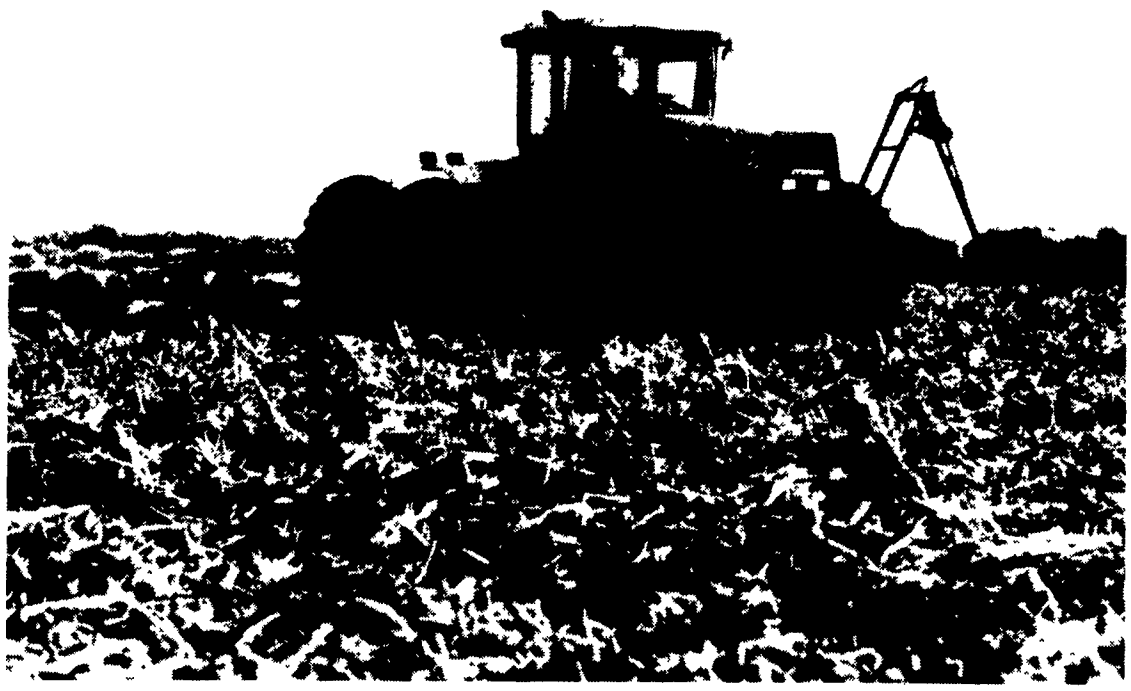
Steiger's first PUMA rolls off assembly line



The 190-horsepower Puma is the smallest of Steiger's new 1000 Series tractors.

REDWOOD FALLS, MN – The delivery of the first of Steiger Tractor's new PUMA 1000 models was marked by ceremonies March 12th in Redwood Falls, MN.

President of Steiger Tractor, Irvin E. Aal, presented a gold key to Tim Baune, Wabasso, MN, the owner of the first PUMA to be delivered on a retail basis, anywhere in the world.

The PUMA 1000 was introduced in January, and is Steiger's first entry into the under 200 horsepower market. The PUMA is rated at 190 HP. The optional, steerable front axle makes it a four-wheel drive tractor that can be used for both tillage and row-crop applications.

Baune and his father, Edmund raise corn, soybeans and livestock in southwestern Minnesota, and both farmers said that the Steiger PUMA will be their basic tractor.

The presentation was made at Schoffman's, Inc., a Redwood Falls implement dealer who sold the machine.

Steiger is a Fargo-based, independent manufacturer of large four-wheel drive tractors, and the PUMA represents a competitive move into the two-wheel drive market. Aal said, "The new PUMA reinforces Steiger's reputation for innovation, and opens up a whole new market segment for us."

Hunger group announces openings

SCOTTSDALE, AZ – "If you're looking for a way to help hungry people in the world and have farming or agricultural skills, we can use you today," says Dr. Tetsunao Yamamori, president of Food for the Hungry "We have openings at our unique Desert Center in Arizona and in Thailand."

The positions are in Food for the Hungry's Hunger Corps, an all-volunteer part of the Christian agency's international operations. A two-year commitment is needed and volunteers must assist in raising their own support.

"Agricultural specialists are essential for many development projects in Third World countries that follow our relief efforts," Dr. Yamamori stated. "People with these skills play a vital role in providing the helping hand needed to break the cycle of hunger and poverty."

The positions in Thailand are for agriculturalist and agriculturalist/development researcher. Volunteers in these positions will be responsible for working with the local villagers in making the best use of available water and land resources and initiating crops and vegetables suitable for local growing conditions.

The agricultural coordinator needed at the Desert Center will direct and expand the operation of the agricultural and animal husbandry demonstrations at the Desert Center in order to communicate good stewardship and creative approaches to alleviating the problems of world hunger.

For more information on these volunteer positions, contact Hunger Corps director Cindy Pagliasotti at Box E, Scottsdale, AZ 85252, or call 1-800-2-HUNGER.

USDA develops sweet onion

MADISON, WI – Onion lovers, get ready to crunch a new onion hybrid that's wowing consumers in the Big Apple and Michigan.

Known as Sweet Sandwich, the hybrid was released in 1982 by USDA and New York and Michigan Agricultural Experiment Stations. "The hybrid yields well, stores well, has a light interior color, and a mild taste and smell, making it suitable in salads and sandwiches," says Clinton E. Peterson, research horticulturist with the Agricultural Research Service, Madison.

Peterson and Philipp W. Simon, ARS research geneticist, grew Sweet Sandwich for 9 years on organic soil at Palmyra, WI. Sweet Sandwich yields equalled yields from Spartan Banner, Spartan Banner 80, Surecrop and Sentinel, widely grown hybrids in northern areas.

In 1984, Sweet Sandwich outyielded Sentinel, the most widely grown onion variety in New York, in four out of seven locations and equalled Sentinel in the other three locations. In New York, Sweet Sandwich produced the large size preferred for mild onions.

In a survey of New Yorkers conducted by Roy Ellerbrock, Extension Vegetable Specialist at Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., Sweet Sandwich was rated milder than Yellow Globe cooking onions by 78 percent of 230 consumers.

Commercial hybrid seed production of Sweet Sandwich began in 1983. By spring of 1986, adequate seed will be available for packet and catalogue seed distributors.

Deutz-Allis introduces Rotary hay equipment line

MILWAUKEE, WI – Deutz-Allis recently announced the introduction of its new "Rotary" line of hay havesting equipment, according to Jerry Oxborough, Product Manager for hay equipment.

"Today, we can fill the need of hay harvesting demands for mowing, mowing-conditioning, tedding, raking and baling, whether the need is square or round bales", said Oxborough.

Here are the highlights of this system:

KM 22 and KM 25
Turbo Drum Mowers

With these units, you don't have to wait for damp hay to completely dry. These turbo drum mowers create a powerful vacuum effect in the mowing chamber to stand up wet hay for complete cutting. With this unique system, hay stems dry fast because they point in the direction they were cut, exposing them to sun and air.

SM 40 CR Mounted
Disc Mower Conditioner

The SM 40 CR is engineered to mow wet or tangled hay and to condition it for fast drying. The two-speed conditioner gear box changes rotor speed to suit grass hay or leaf crops. Hay is mowed and conditioned without plugging and formed in a clean swath perfect for quick drying.

SM 70 Pull-Type
Mower Conditioner

For high-capacity minded operators, the SM 70 10 ½ pull type is the answer. Available with a choice of either the intermeshing roller conditioner for legume hay or the tine conditioner for grass hay. Both models have adjustable swath forming shields and lateral header flotation.

KS 1.50 and KS 200
Rotary Rakes

Rotary raking action means fluffy windrows and this promise is kept with the KS 1.50 and KS 200 Rotary Rakes. With tine arms supporting three dual springs tines on each arm, there's no wasted motion. Hay is raked across the stubble into neat windrows without the twisting effect of conventional rakes.

KH 300 and KH 500
Rotary Haymaker Tedders

These rotary haymaker tedders can reduce drying time by up to another 50% during high-moisture haymaking conditions. They gently scoop up flattened hay and remove the waxy coating from the stem for fast drying. These rotary tedders are available either as pull-type or mounted.

KU 250 DN
Rotary Haymaker/Rake

This rotary haymaker/rake is a tool that does the work of two by tedding and raking. Tedding can be done early followed by raking perfect windrows. This combination tool fits many medium-sized hay operations.

490 Rectangular Baler

When it comes to packaging hay, this baler is designed to handle over 6' wide windrows at a rate up to 23 tons of hay per hour. Bales are uniform and well-shaped with high density for long-lasting strength. The plunger assembly glides smoothly on 10 sealed roller bearings at 100 strokes per minutes.

GP 2.30; GP 2.50 and
GP 2.80 Round Balers

These are fixed-chamber round balers that build bales that have quality and a high-density outer wrap. The constant-size rolling chamber creates bales with a smooth, firm outer shell and permeable core, allowing moisture from condensation or storage to dissipate freely. All models feature automatic bale twine wrap, automatic chain oiling, and bale discharge bar.

"These quality haying tools are new to North America, and are field-proven in Europe," Oxborough said. In fact, they have become the world's largest selling line of rotary hay equipment, he adds.

The new Deutz-Allis KM25 drum mower creates a powerful vacuum effect to stand up wet hay.
